Keynote speaker at the Pa. Farmers Union Convention this week in Hershey was National Farmers Union president Cy Carpenter.

Nat'l Farmers Union chief blasts Reagan farm policy

BY JACK HUBLEY

HERSHEY — "Cruel and vicious indifference," was National Farmers Union president Cy Carpenter's description of the current administration's laissez faire stance concerning governmental support of agriculture.

Addressing state delegates to the 13th annual Pa. Farmers Union convention held at the Hotel Hershey on Tuesday and Wednesday, the NFU chief pointed out that farmers' willingness to participate in production control programs in order to insure fair commodity prices has apparently fallen on deaf ears in Washington.

"If we can afford $50 designer jeans, we can afford a decent price for food at the farm level," emphasized Carpenter, "but this administration is forcing the cost of food lower and lower with no protection for farmers in the marketplace."

Carpenter pointed to the government's apparent refusal to consider extending the dairy diversion program as a symptom of its lack of regard for the serious economic plight of farmers. He noted that the producer-financed diversion program has reduced production and maintained a steady supply of products at no additional cost to the taxpayer.

"There is no reason for not continuing the program," Carpenter said, predicting serious consequences when the diversion program comes to an end this spring. A substantial increase in cow numbers and milk production, will cause the administration to call for even lower prices, driving large numbers of dairymen out of business and putting the industry in the hands of a few, he said.

Instead of scrapping the diversion program, the NFU chief favors stronger compliance, and a

Study to focus on vo-ag

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In an effort to find what course the vocational agriculture program in the nation's high schools should take in the coming years the National Council on Vocational and Technical Education in Agriculture has appointed a committee of experts to study the program.

Over the next 14 months the committee will review and evaluate the vocational agriculture/FFA programs at the high school level and will make recommendations to strengthen them.

Larry Case, chairman of the Council, said the impetus for the study came from a concern over the decreasing number of students enrolled in the vo-ag program and a belief that the program may not be keeping pace with the changing face of agriculture.

Since 1980 membership in the Future Farmers of America has decreased by 29,011 members or about six percent. And although not all vo-ag students are also FFA members, Case said he believes

Farm Show champs bring 'beefy' bids

BY JACK HUBLEY

HARRISBURG — Although most veteran Farm Show junior market showmen are quick to admit that it's never easy to say goodbye to your "partner" come sale day, a host of enthusiastic buyers were again on hand at this year's sale to make the parting easier.

At sale's end last Friday afternoon, buyers had bid a total of $172,533 for the 407 head of beef, sheep and swine offered.

And heading the day's grocery list was Casey, the grand champion steer exhibited by Kelly Rohrer of Manheim. Danny George of George's Foodliner, Bethlehem, topped the bidding at $8.50 per pound, making Casey the second highest priced steer in Farm Show history. Miss Rohrer received $10,752 for her 1265-pound entry. A long-time supporter of the 4-H program, George has purchased about 15 Farm show champions.

Willie the Butcher went home with the reserve champion steer owned by Sally Messick of Middletown. At $3 per pound, Willie's beef cost him $3,735.

Contending bidder for the grand champion was Arthur J. Glatfelter of York, the purchaser of 1983's top steer that went for an all-time record of $12 per pound. This year Glatfelter was again in the running for some of the show's top beef, buying Joe Druck's heavyweight division champion for $2 per pound. The steer was then donated to the York area Chamber of Commerce to be used in fund-raising activities for the York County 4-H and FFA programs.

Buying the grand champion lamb has become a tradition for Leroy Fox Sr. of Fox's Foods, Inc., with locations in Hershey, Middletown and Union Deposit. And at $5,040, this year's top market lamb, exhibited by Margaret Herr

Along with the scores of champion livestock exhibited this year, the Farm Show also had a champion exhibitor by the name of Dwayne Coble. Read his story on page A-19.

Keep paddling, guys!

So says the big mallard drake in the center of photo who happens to be admiral of this small armada of ducks on a farm pond belonging Marvin Shenk of Lititz. These ducks weren't the only waterfowl reduced to bathtub-size swimming holes when temperatures dropped well below zero across the state early this week. For such year 'round bathers Mother Nature's message range loud and clear: Keep paddling...or head for Miami.

A New Year's Resolution

There is an old saying that New Year's Resolutions are made to be broken.

Not so. Since 1898 when Walter M. Dunlap founded the firm, it has been our yearly resolution to continue to serve our consignors to the best of our ability, to show no partiality, and to treat everybody fairly and squarely regardless of market conditions.

That's the way it's been, and we intend to keep it that way.

No broken resolutions for us — that you can count on!

In the meantime, have a Good New Year! From all of us to all of you.

Today's L.T.L. asking prices are unchanged to higher on U.S. Grade A at 52-58 cents.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

JAN. 28-FEB. 3, 1985

The cold lingers on — will it ever be gone?

Watch for amethyst sunsets now U C L A won its 88th consecutive basketball game, Jan 29, 1974 Average length of days for the week, 10 hours First quarter of the moon Jan 28 (Mon) "Lone Ranger ' first broadcast Jan 30, 1933 Groundhog Day Feb 2 (if he sees his shadow, there will be six more weeks of winter)

Example has more followers than reason

Ask the Old Farmer: From my Vermont family I acquired a tin candle mold It is in one piece, not split How did they get the candles out in one piece? A L , Cherry Hill, N J

Wax shrinks slightly as it cools, so candles often could be lifted out Or the mold could be dipped briefly in hot water, similar to the way you remove gelled dishes from fancy molds Most craft shops sell a spray that helps prevent sticking

Home Hints: To keep children s new shoes from slipping, lightly sandpaper the soles

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

New England: Beginning of week cold, midweek continuing cold, with snow in south, by end of week clearing skies, still cold

Greater New York-New Jersey Through midweek sunny and mild, end of week brings snow and cold

Middle Atlantic Coastal. Clear and mild at week's beginning, midweek rain, snow in mountains, cold and rainy, with snow in mountains and north by week's end

Piedmont & Southeast Coastal: Beginning of week clear and warm, midweek brings showers, clearing by end of week

Bottle Bill reintroduced in Pa. Senate

HARRISBURG – Sen. Edward W. Helfrick, R-27, reintroduced legislation this week which would require a nickel deposit to be paid on beverage containers sold in Pennsylvania. This deposit would be refunded to consumers when the bottles and cans were returned to a retail store or a redemption center, Helfrick explained.

"I introduced a similar Bottle Bill last session," said Helfrick. "Unfortunately, that piece of legislation never made it out of the Senate Environmental Resources and Energy Committee. This time I am optimistic that this legislation will not get bottled up by a committee stalemate. We've made a number of important changes to the bill which should help it move and get the votes it needs for passage."

Helfrick pointed out that one major change in the bill was transferring administrative responsibility from the state's Department of Environmental Resources to the Department of Agriculture.

"In working with Secretary Penrose Hallowell and his staff, we felt the best place for administering this kind of legislation was with the Department of Agriculture. They already have responsibilities for inspecting retail food markets, and they were willing to get involved in issuing the necessary permits for redemption centers where consumers can return empty beverage containers and get their refund," Helfrick explained.

The senator emphasized farmers in Pennsylvania suffer millions of dollars in damage each year due to carelessly discarded beverage containers. "They can lacerate the stomachs of livestock grazing in the fields where these cans and bottles are thrown," said Helfrick. "They can puncture farm equipment tires as fields are prepared for planting and harvesting crops, and can contaminate entire wagonloads of livestock feed as the harvesting machines pick up and shred the roadside litter, mixing the fragments of glass and tin with tons of grain and silage.

"When surveyed, about ninety percent of the farmers in Pennsylvania say they favor a returnable container law," said Helfrick. "And, there is a growing sentiment among the general public that a deposit law, like the ones in New York and Oregon, would go a long way in cleaning up our state and reducing the pressure on our landfills which are fast running out of room to bury the tons of garbage we generate each day." A recent report by the Department of Environmental Resources stated that by 1992, Pennsylvania's landfills will be completely full, added the senator.

While retail stores will charge a nickel deposit for beer and soft drink bottles and cans less than a gallon in size, they will not be charging the deposit on bottles and cans of noncarbonated water, soups, milk, fruit juices and medicines. The beverage containers holding the beer and soft drinks can be made out of glass, metal, plastic or any combination of these materials. Paper containers are exempt.

Retail stores and redemption centers will collect the returned beverage containers and will then be able to return the bottles and cans to a local distributor to receive a five-cent deposit plus a two-cent handling charge, or sell the collected cans and glass to a recycling center. Beverage distributors can return the containers to the beverage manufacturer for a nickel refund and a two-cent handling fee, or they have the option to sell to a recycler. Manufacturers that reuse refillable bottles help to conserve energy, reduce air pollution, and save natural resources, noted Helfrick.

"Oregon was the first state to pass a Bottle Bill back in 1972," said Helfrick. "Their Environmental Council reports that roughly 1,400 billion BTUs, enough energy to heat 12,000 Oregon homes, are saved each year due to their returnable container law. Vermont, which passed their bottle legislation in 1973, estimates a savings of 708 BTUs of energy each year due to bottle and can recycling."

In the area of air pollution, Helfrick noted an Environmental Protection Agency study which stated that one refillable bottle used ten times creates less than half the air pollution emissions and less than one-third the industrial wastes as ten throwaway containers.

One of the major arguments against a bottle law, said Helfrick, is loss of jobs. Experience in other states, he noted, show actual increases in total jobs as a result of deposit legislation. "Oregon's experience shows that warehousing and truck driving positions increased by 715, while production jobs in the packaging industry declined by 350. This same sort of increase was predicted in Massachusetts where the bottle law went into effect in January 1983. Their Environmental Affairs office expected a net gain of 1,800 skilled and unskilled jobs."

Admitting that this is a controversial bill, Helfrick said he is resolved to see this kind of legislation passed this session. "We've been dragging our heels on this issue for too long. It's time the public outcry for a cleaner, better Pennsylvania is heard above the well-financed roar of the bottle and can industry lobbyists who have managed to squelch all the previous efforts."

Cosponsors of Helfrick's bill, Senate Bill 191, include Sen. Noah Wenger, Sen. Guy Kratzer, and Sen. Anthony Andrezeski.

To Make Sure Ponds Are Safe

Over the last couple of weeks I've noticed a lot of people, both young and old, ice skating on farm ponds. It's good exercise and an excellent sport. But, be sure you are prepared in case of an accident. Owners should be certain that rescue equipment is handy and not in the barn or garage several blocks away. Wooden ladders, boards or other items can be shoved out to the person in the water if needed; it should be large enough to distribute the weight of the person making the rescue. A rope is also a good item to pull people out with.

Skating is a very enjoyable winter sport. Don't be the victim of an accident that could have been prevented.

To Exercise Dairy Cows

The importance of turning out the dairy herd each day from stanchions or comfort stalls should not be overlooked. As we expect more production per cow, the stresses are greater, and if not given exercise, more breeding problems will result. Dairymen with free-stalls have the opportunity of observing heat periods all the time. However, cows that are confined to stalls present a problem with heat detection. There are very few days that the weather is so bad that the milking herd should not be turned out for a few minutes. If the dairymen is alert and observing, cows that are in heat can be observed and bred. Exercise may help the herds with breeding problems.

To Review Forage Crop Fertilization

The correct use of fertilizer is extremely important in time of tight margins. Many agronomists feel that too many farmers do not use enough fertilizer on their grass and hay crops. In general terms we can expect about $3 in return for every dollar spent for fertilizer on the average farm crop. On many forage crops acres this return can be greater when properly fertilized. Just because the land is covered with grass or a grass-legume mixture, we should not

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

TO KNOW GOD
January 27, 1985

Background Scripture:
John 5:19-24; 8:12-59.
Devotional Reading:
John 8:31-35.

Once again, we find that, although many people heard Jesus gladly and became his disciples, many others preferred to haggle with him over questions of theology. They accuse him of bearing witness to himself, of making blasphemous claims, of denigrating their spiritual status as true sons of Abraham, and of consorting with the Devil.

Jesus tries to help them to understand that he is not directing attention to himself, but to the God whom he represents: "I came not of my own accord, but he who sent me" (8:42). And later he says, "...I do not seek my own glory" (8:50). "I honor my father," he proclaims.

THROUGH, NOT AT

Those who contended with Jesus were having what one commentator calls "the optical problem." They were looking at Jesus, when they should have been looking through Jesus. They were stuck on the question of who Jesus was and were failing to focus on the One who sent Jesus in the first place.

It is like a picture window in your house: the purpose of the window is not served very well if you spend all your time looking at the window, but fail to see through it the object or scene on the other side. A window's purpose is not to divert attention to itself, but to serve as the medium by which we can see something on the other side.

So it is with Jesus Christ, he alw[illegible]es us to see God in him. If you k[illegible]me," he says, "you would know my F[illegible]" (8:19). That's really the heart of the gospel: if we get to know Jesus we will also be close to the Father. People may spend their time disputing as to how Jesus can be the Son of God, how he could say, "before Abraham was, I am" (8:58) and countless other points of theological and doctrinal contention, but you do not have to have the answers to those questions before you can experience the reality of God in Christ.

SET FREE

Some of those who heard Jesus bristled when he promised to set them "free" with his truth. "We are descendents of Abraham, and have never been in bondage to anyone. How is it that you say, 'You will be made free'?" (8:33). The worst part is that they don't even realize that they are not "free." Their relationship to Abraham has made them, not free, but slaves to a deadly legalism that kept them from recognizing the validity of this man from God. If they had been truly "free," they would have recognized that the was from God.

None of us is ever truly "free" when we are so encumbered by our religious ideas that we fail to let Jesus show us the God whom he came to earth to reveal.

overlook the value of fertilization. A complete soil test is the place to start to meet the recommended needs. Forage crops can be produced on all types of land and are usually some of the most efficient feeds that can be fed to livestock. Proper fertilization will make greater utilization of forage lands.

To Update Private Applicator Pesticide Certificate

Many farmers have private applicator licenses to buy and apply restricted use pesticides to cropland, livestock and poultry buildings. These are usually issued for three years. A number of these will expire on Sept. 30, 1985. This means you will need to attend a meeting where current pesticide uses and recommendations are discussed and explained. By so doing, you can quality to receive an update training certificate which in turn will get you a license renewal.

During the winter time, a number of meetings are held by Extension and agri-business. These are ideal times and places to receive your update training certificate. Dairy Days, Crops and Soils Day and Poultry Day are three such meetings. Don't miss the opportunity to update your license before it expires.

The Extension Service is an affirmative action, equal opportunity educational institution.

USDA announces 1984 rates for Wisc., Ohio tobaccos

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture today issued loan rates for the various grades of 1984-crop cigar binder and filler tobaccos (types 42-44 and 54-55).

According to Everett Rank, administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the rates are based on the national average support rates of 90.7 cents per pound announced July 3 and are unchanged from 1983.

Rates for Ohio filler (types 42-44) tobacco range from 56 to 98 cents per pound; for Wisconsin type 54, from 15 cents to $1.02 per pound; and for northern Wisconsin type 55, from 46 cents to $1.20 per pound.

Rank said associations receiving tobacco for price support will deduct assessments for no-net-cost tobacco accounts from amounts paid producers. Also, the southern Wisconsin and Ohio tobacco associations will deduct 2 cents and the northern Wisconsin association 1 cent per pound to help defray the associations' administrative costs.

Only the original producer is eligible for price support advances.

Penn Staters volunteered at Farm Show

UNIVERSITY PARK — Penn State students were an integral part of the 69th Pennsylvania Farm Show. Thirty-eight undergraduates from the College of Agriculture volunteered their time to highlight the College and its programs.

Among them was Dorothy Meyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Meyer of Lancaster, who is a sophomore majoring in Agricultural Science at Penn State.

She talked to 4-H'ers, members of FFA and other high school students and their parents about careers open to college graduates in agricultural science, production and business. The U.S. Department of Labor estimates that there will be more than 50,000 new jobs a year in agribusiness until the 1900's, securing agriculture's rank as the top industry in Pennsylvania and in the nation.

Dorothy and other college volunteers offered information on associate, baccalaureate and graduate degree programs in the College of Agriculture. They also talked with prospective students about college activities, student services, financial aid and application procedures at Penn State.

Other features of the banquet program planned by retiring president Tom Bollinger and the other outgoing officers include special appreciation awards and greetings from the Cloister FFA and the Pennsylvania Young Farmers Association.

In addition to production achievement awards and the door prizes, the evening's entertainment will be a Pa. Dutch folk humorist, Jakey Budderschnip.

Fun, the future promised at Jr. Holstein Convention

PHILADELPHIA — There is something for everyone at the 1985 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention — including junior Holstein enthusiasts. The Pa. Junior Holstein Convention includes a full two-day slate of activities at the Adam's Mark Hotel, Philadelphia, on Feb. 21 and 22.

The action begins early Thursday with the Pa. Holstein Convention Sale, followed by the State Holstein Dairy Bowl contest on Thursday afternoon. The two days of meetings, activities, and entertainment will end Friday evening with a trip to the Riverfront Dinner Theater to see the musical "The Wiz."

One of the highlights of the Junior Convention is the State Holstein Dairy Bowl Contest. As many as 50 senior and junior teams from county Holstein clubs throughout the state will compete in the exciting dairy question and answer contest. In addition to other prizes, the winning senior team will earn the right to represent Pennsylvania at the Centennial Holstein Convention, to be held June 23-27, in Hartford, Conn.

This year's dairy bowl contest will be conducted by the students from the dairy society of Delaware Valley College. They promise challenging questions and a fun contest. County Holstein dairy bowl teams are encouraged to start practicing, and for junior members who come from counties without teams, they are invited to get together teams of four for the state contest.

Thursday night is designated Phantastic Philly night with a theme dinner followed by two educational workshops about advertising and about the Distinguished Junior Member Contest. The evening will end on a musical note with a dance featuring "Purple Haze." And a make-your-own ice cream sundae bar will finish off a fun night in Philly.

And there will be no sleeping in on Friday morning; two important early morning events will coincide with an Adam's Mark breakfast buffet. Former Philadelphia Eagles coach Dick Vermeil will address the breakfast crowd, and the 1985 Dairy Bowl Finals for the senior teams will be held.

Following the awards breakfast, the junior Holstein membership will conduct their business meeting and district meetings, and elect officers.

The Junior Holstein Awards Luncheon will follow the business meeting. Special attraction of the luncheon will be the presentation of the 1985 Distinguished Junior Member Awards.

Last year's award winner, John Burkett, went on to receive national recognition. And this year's winner will represent the state at the breed organization's 100th anniversary national convention.

Another special attraction will be a slide presentation and talk by Jerry Myers, faculty member of the Dairy Science Department of Delaware Valley College, on your opportunities in international agriculture.

For mid-afternoon on Friday, an informal swimming party is scheduled at the Adam's Mark indoor pool. In addition a large whirlpool, racquetball courts, and other recreational equipment will be available for junior members' use.

On Friday evening the junior convention will adjourn to the neighboring Riverfront Dinner Theatre to see a live performance of the hit musical "The Wiz." For those who have never been to a hit play or a dinner theatre, the evening will certainly be an enjoyable experience.

The 1985 Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Convention will focus on the future of junior members in the Holstein industry, but it will provide plenty of opportunity for fun in Philadelphia. Everyone is invited to participate in the dairy bowl contest and enjoy all the activities of the convention.

For more information about the Pa. Junior Holstein Convention program contact Ed Breckbill at 215-932-3307.

Major USDA survey begins this month

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is launching a major survey this month on 1984 farm production expenses, debts and assets, crop and livestock sales, and costs of production.

Letters are going out to about 24,000 farmers representing a broad cross section of American agriculture—from Louisiana rice growers to Wyoming ranchers. Interviewers will then visit these farmers between Jan. 21 and March 8 to conduct the Farm Costs and Returns Survey.

Survey results will be used to determine farm production expenditures, help measure farm income, and assess farm sector debts, assets, and cash flow—key indicators of the economic well-being of farmers. Survey results will also be used to estimate the costs and returns of producing individual commodities by size and type of farm.

"This is one of the best ways for farmers to get their story out," says economist is Jim Johnson of USDA's Economic Research Service. "The survey results, will help farm analysts, legislators, producer groups, and farm suppliers better understand the needs and problems within the farm sector, and how those needs and problems vary from one type of farm and one region to another," according to Johnson.

Responses to each questionnaire are confidential, and all questionnaires are destroyed when summary data are sent from state offices to USDA headquarters in Washington. There, USDA's Statistical Reporting Service will compile the survey statistics, and the Economic Research Service will analyze the results. Both agencies will report their findings to Congress, farmers, and the public.

Grange speaks out on Farm Bill

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Grange Master Charles Wismer this week told U.S. Senator Arlen Specter that the 1985 Farm Bill must be directed toward increasing the farmer's return for his investments in labor and capital to bring his net income up to par with other segments of the economy.

Wismer spoke at a hearing conducted by the senator Jan. 16 in Harrisburg on the 1985 Farm Bill and other national farm issues of concern to Pennsylvania's farm organizations.

Wismer pointed out that "since 1983, 120 bankruptcies and 160 voluntary liquidations have thinned the already dwindling ranks of the Pennsylvania farm community."

"We must reserve this downward trend and bring security to the family farmer," he said.

In the 1985 Farm Bill, the Grange supports limiting all federal farm payments to farms with gross incomes of between $20,000 and $200,000, "becuase under $20,000, the farm is only a part-time or hobby operation, and over $200,000, the operation is stable and does not need governmental assistance," Wismer said. Foreign markets must be found for our agricultural products, he added, and farmers should be given incentive to produce food and fiber that have a market.

The dairy industry in Pennsylvania is in serious financial difficulty, the Grange leader said, attributing this to the fact that utility rates, the consumer price index, feed costs and fuel all have increased significantly while the price of fluid milk paid to the farmer has actually decreased over the past three years. "The annual price of milk since 1981 has decreased $1 per, hundredweight," Wismer said. "As a result, in Order 4 (Philadelphia area) alone, the number of dairy farmers has decreased from 7,327 in 1981 to 6,703 in October, 1984."

Solutions proposed by the Grange include updating the dairy price support formula to tie the support price to current costs, productivity and other factors that reflect milk production in the nation. This formula should fluctuate in response to supply and demand as determined by the rate of surplus dairy products purchased by the Commodity Credit Corporation, according to the Grange.

Any assessment program should be conducted on a regional basis, Wismer said, referring to the current 50, cents per hundredweight assessment program on all dairy farmers in the nation. Those regions of the country which contribute most to overproduction should be penalized rather than lowering the support price for all dairy farmers, he said.

The Grange master also expressed his concern about producers being paid on time for their commodities. The Grange seeks legislation requiring prompter payment for dairy and poultry products as well as a secured creditor status for all producers in bankruptcy proceedings so that farmers have first claim on accounts receivable and inventories of bankrupt dealers of their products. Specter introduced a bill during the last session requiring payment to poultry producers for birds grown for slaughter within seven days of delivery to the processor. The Grange urged that this legislation be introduced again in the new session of Congress.

"Farmers must pay their bills in a timely manner, but to do this, they must receive their payment on time," Wismer said.

Wismer concluded his statement by calling for elected leaders' support for American agriculture to ensure financial stability and prosperous family farming.

Public meeting Feb. 20 on 'wild horse' bldg. contract

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A public meeting will be held Wednesday, Feb. 20 in Harrisburg to discuss a new three year contract for a Wild Horse and Burro Adoption Center in the Eastern Pennsylvania-Northern Maryland area.

The U.S. Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management (BLM) will soon accept proposals from persons interested in contracting to build and operate the facility, which the bureau hopes to open in May. The public meeting will acquaint potential contractors with BLM's Adopt-a-Horse or Burro Program, the requirements of the new contract, and bidding and proposal procedures.

The meeting will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Room B of the Pennsylvania Farm Show Building, Cameron and Maclay Streets, Harrisburg, Pa. Additional details are available from Betty Gillas of BLM, phone (703) 274-0232.

The Adopt-a-Horse or Burro Program is a 10-year-old effort on the part of BLM to find homes for excess wild horses and burros removed from overgrazed public rangelands in several western states. The animals are shipped by truck to adoption centers, and maintained under healthful conditions until picked up by qualified adopters.

In addition to building and maintaining the year-round adoption center, the recipient of the new contract will be expected periodically to carry out "satellite" adoptions, which are temporary adoption centers set up in various locations throughout the Northeast. The new contract calls for as many as four satellites each year. The 36-month contract includes an option for renewal through the end of September 1989.

Dwayne Coble takes life's challenges in stride

Dwayne Coble, 13, readies "Cinnamon" for the steer competition at Farm Show last week. Scarcely more than two weeks after losing his arm in a farm-related accident, he was back in the barn working with his Farm Show prospect.

BY JACK HUBLEY

As with many young livestock exhibitors across the state, the Farm Show looms large in the life of 13-year-old 4-H'er Dwayne Coble.

And like most farm-raised boys, Dwayne has learned to accept more responsibility than most boys his age. On the family's 129-acre cattle and hog farm near Hershey, there's always work to be done, and Dwayne has proven himself equal to the task.

But the old adage about "all work and no play" holds true even for the most industrious of farm families–and especially for the younger family members with plenty of energy to burn after the chores are done.

Farm Show has always been an effective outlet for this energy. A kind of second holiday season where young exhibitors can showcase their ability to raise, fit and show quality livestock.

And Farm Show may well have been on the mind of young Dwayne Coble on the day after Thanksgiving while he tended to the task of spreading manure. With the tank spreader loaded, Dwayne turned to turn off the PTO when his sweatshirt became entangled in the PTO's knuckle.

Though his brother Dave came running from the barn immediately upon hearing Dwayne's cries for help, the damage had already been done. After spending 10 days at the Hershey Medical Center, Dwayne returned home without his right arm.

Under similar circumstances many people would have thrown in the towel, but the young farmer summarizes his ordeal with an understatement that forces the listener to look twice. Did this young man lose his arm or merely sprain a wrist?

Scarcely five days after returning home from Hershey, Dwayne was already back in the routine of prepping his Farm Show prospect, a Charolais-Angus steer named Cinnamon.

"I worked with him every day up till the show. It was fun, but I had a couple of difficulties," he says matter-of-factly. "I wasn't really used to it right away."

Dwayne never considered dropping out of the running for the Farm Show, and his parents, Dave and Sylvia Coble, were prepared to back his decision all the way to the arena.

"At first he was afraid of being knocked down," recalls Dave, "but he's worked with the steer daily and even haltered him himself. I felt confident that he could do a good job."

Which is precisely what the young Coble did at this year's junior market steer show, less than two months after his debilitating accident. Leading Cinnamon into the large arena with the rope held in his left hand and extending across his chest, Dwayne campaigned the steer to a fifth-place win in the lightweight division.

The young exhibitor is taking other formidable tasks in stride as well.

"I can write with my left hand," points out the previous right-hander. "I picked it up right away." Farm work has also become a part of his daily regimen once again, with caring for the cattle and helping with the pigs included in his duties.

"I never thought of pitying myself," Dwayne says, adding that plenty of support from his parents has made the adjustment period easier.

"He's had a lot of support from his schoolmates and church, too," says his father, pointing out that as many as 35 people visited him in one day during his hospital stay.

And this support was manifested again last Friday when a group of more than 65 businesses and private individuals, organized by Dauphin County Beef Club leader Jim Foreman, joined hands to drive the price of Dwaynes 1,080-pound steer to $6.10 per pound.

Dwayne has already determined to channel part of his Farm Show earnings into next year's market steer prospect. The rest of the money will go into a savings account for his future education.

Dave Coble says that his son will be fitted for a prosthesis in the near future. Which should put this ambitious young man's goal of raising his own herd of purebred Angus heifers squarely within reach.

"He's accepted it now," concludes Dwayne's father. "We feel there's been a lot of answered prayers."

Farm Show '85 saw many a champion pass though its doors. But no one can dispute the fact that the grandest champion of them all was a young Dauphin County cattleman named Dwayne Coble.

You can afford to cut feed bills

Feed costs make up more than half the cost of producing milk. Maybe you can't do much about feed prices, but you can increase feeding efficiency. With a Computrac feeding system, you automatically adjust each cow's feed ration to her specific stage of lactation or adjust for the precise ration you want.

You not only save feed, you can actually increase milk production by bringing each cow to maximum production sooner and maintaining the peak longer. Computrac is easy to learn and easy to use, for stand alone computerized feeding or as part of an expanding farm management system.

Best of all, Computrac is priced to make computerized feeding affordable. Often, Computrac can be adapted to your present system to reduce the cost even more. Computrac doesn't have to be more expensive to be better. Call or write to find out how you can cut your feed bills.

Dever reports on Inter-State status at District 11 meeting

BY WENDY WEHR

COCHRANVILLE — Members of Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative District 11 met Thursday, January 24, for their annual dinner meeting, held in Cochranville. Inter-State Assistant General Manager Robert Dever offered a review of 1984 and some comments about the uncertain prospects for the dairy industry in 1985.

Also addressing the dairy farmers was Trish Williams, Director of Communications for the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Agency. Elections of officers and delegates were also held during the annual meeting.

Last year represented a year of change for Inter-State, said Dever. The cooperative experienced a 16 million pound drop in milk due to the diversion program. While this is a small percentage of the total volume of milk handled, he added, the drop followed several years of unbridled growth in production.

Also during 1984, said Dever, Inter-State's largest customer — Abbott's — went bankrupt, leaving the co-op with a $2.5 million loss. While this was a serious blow, every member did get paid, reassured Dever. How much of that loss can be recovered is uncertain, but Dever informed the members that a creditors' committee has been formed and that Inter-State is well represented.

"In 1985," said Dever, "we do have to address the supply and demand question." While the President, and Mr. Stockman of OMB, and the federal government may want to get out of supporting the farm program altogether, he continued, at there very least we will see some adjustment in the support price program.

"As long as we're looking at an oversupply situation," cautioned Dever, "we'll probably have lower prices than now." Increased consumption may point to a good long-run outlook, but in the short-run prices will be down.

Dever encouraged the farmer-members to talk to their U.S. congressmen. Tell them what ag and the family farm means to you, what your votes mean to them, and where you stand on the cost of production and price of milk, concluded Dever.

Sharing information with the Inter-State dairymen about the Order 4 milk promotion program was Trish Williams of the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Agency. Inter-State is the largest contributor to MAMMA, and 10 of the agency's 19 board members are Inter-State representatives.

Williams outlined the 1985 promotion program and showed the members a sampling of dairy advertisements being aired on television. She reviewed the goals of the dietary calcium ad campaign, which focuses on the health risks of insufficient calcium intake, minimum daily calcium requirements, and dairy products as the single best source of calcium.

She noted that because the Middle Atlantic area is a densely populated consumer market, more national advertising dollars are being spent here than are generated here. MAMMA's 1985 focus will be on fluid milk advertising, she added, including the "It's Fitness You Can Drink" campaign.

Chairing the annual meeting was Steve Mason, president of the Oxford local, and presenting awards was District 11 Director, H. Lee Brown.

Brown presented Richard Buckwalter with an award for five years continuous participation in Inter-State's cost of production study. Brown also recognized Horace Prang, recently retired Inter-State director.

Terry Stauffer delivered the delegate's report, reminding the members of the history of the Hand tells District 12 members of Inter-State's stability

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

QUARRYVILLE – Members of Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative District 12 were reassured Thursday by General Manager Dr. Paul Hand about the financial health of their cooperative at their annual dinner meeting held at the Hoffman Building.

Hand said that the loss suffered because of the Abbott's dairy situation was the first major loss sustained by the cooperative. He called it a "serious but manageable problem," able to be handled because of the cooperative's $12 million in net equity.

Hand said that he heard one member describe the loss as having about the same impact as that of a farmer losing one cow in his herd. Hand said. "That's about the right perspective."

The cooperative has experienced $\frac{1}{4}$ million in profits since August 1, the beginning of their fiscal year, putting them well ahead of last year, according to Hand. Even the operating losses at the Holly plant have been offset with income realized from the milk pulled away from that plant and sold through spot sales.

Dr. Paul Hand, general manager, Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative, discusses the co-op's financial position with members of District 12.

Hand called 1985 a tough year for the cooperative and for dairymen. Although membership was down $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent, the increase in production will offset the loss of membership, Hand told the group. He said they are predicting a two percent increase in production for 1985.

December production per member equaled the same as last December's, the first month for that to occur since last February. He said the situation is changing because of the anticipation of the end of the paid diversion program and the good growing season just experienced. Hand said dairymen are getting back to where they were last year. He added that the December price paid by the co-op was the highest in history.

Hand told the group that the national dairy situation has improved, with increased demand and sales. Calling the paid diversion program "quite extraordinary," he said that it eliminated about one half the national surplus in the 15 months of its existence.

Although there have been some efforts to extend the program, Hand said the latest word from Washington is that the administration is strongly opposed to an extension and that the Congressional leaders who supported it have agreed not to push for an extension. Hand said the National Milk Producers Federation, of which Interstate is a member, is working on a program which would be a continuation of the price support program, but would include input factors from the dairy side, as well as supply and demand. Hand commented that the dairy industry will have a big job communicating with members of Congress to provide for a viable farm program.

Curtis Akers, director of Inter-State's District 12, right, congratulates Joel Z. Dubble, Quarryville, on receiving his 25 year membership award.

District Director Curtis Akers also assured members that there would be no assessments because of the assumption of the Abbott's obligations. He reported that though Holly was cut back to processing four days a week in the fall, over the 10-day holiday period it processed 25 million pounds of milk. He concluded, "Holly is serving a very needed purpose with the cooperative."

Akers added, "Our aim is to provide a secure market and give the best possible return to members." He cautioned that an "erosion of membership weakens the voice of the cooperative."

County Agent Jay Irwin urged members to support their cooperative and to make their wishes known to management. "That's what makes a strong co-op."

Akers presented a 25 year award to Joel Z. Dubble, Quarryville, and a 50-year family membership award to the Joseph Fisher family, Ronks.

David and Linda Longenecker were introduced as the 1985 Young

Commitment to farming, production goes hand-in-hand for Reynolds

BY WENDY WEHR

WATSONTOWN — There's no place like the farm they say, and once farming "gets in your blood," you're hooked. But today, that old yearning for farm life must be tempered by economic reality. There's no place like the farm — if you're on sound financial ground.

Irvin and Janet Reynolds probably wouldn't argue with that — their lives have mirrored the predicament. Irvin tried working away from the farm, but, as he says, "it just got in my blood." Then when the Reynolds made the commitment for Irvin to return to the farm, they were faced with the challenge of establishing a profitable enterprise in an uncertain ag economy.

Today Irvin and Janet Reynolds have the top herd average in Northumberland County. Milking 87 grade Holsteins three times a day, their 1984 average peaked at 21,012 pounds milk and 709 pounds fat. They met the challenge by boosting milk production by nearly 4,000 pounds per cow in just a few short years.

For the love of farming

But before building up that outstanding herd average there came an initial commitment to get into — or back into — farming.

"Actually, this is Irvin's homestead," says Janet about Blue-Vu Acres, the 180-acre farm and dairy operation they maintain north of Watsontown, east of the West Branch of the Susquehanna River. "His family was in butchering. And when he came home from the service he raised pigs, had a few cows, and worked part-time for a mason and contractor."

Although Irvin did buy out his dad and build up to about 35 cows in the original barn, he then decided to leave the farm. "We had sale and got rid of all the cows, and Irvin went into politics, serving as a township supervisor for six years," explains Janet.

"But after we had sale, in two weeks he was getting up in the morning to help the neighbors milk," confesses Janet. And then after six years of township work — keeping the snow cleared from 50 miles of township roads and listening to people's complaints — enough was enough, says Janet. "He knew he'd rather be farming."

Once their decision to farm was made, another event in their lives forced them into a "no turning back" situation. The original barn on the farm burned beyond repair, so they were forced to invest in a new building.

"In 1972 we made up our minds, do or die. If we were going to do anything, we'd start over new and farm like you ought to," remembers Janet.

So they began in 1972 with one new barn with 42 stanchions and 30 cows that they purchased from a neighbor. Over the past twelve years they've expanded, adding 80 free stalls, a machinery shed, three Harvestores and a liquid manure system, and they've increased their herd to about 180 head, including calves and heifers.

In addition to the 180 acres they own, the Reynolds also rent some land. "We farm around 400 acres altogether," says Irvin as he explains how they use the acreage. "We put out mostly corn and hay, about 180 acres of corn, a couple hundred acres of hay and a few beans, and once in a while a little Sudan grass or barley.

The big chore off baling all that hay is what led in part, to the purchase of the Harvestores, says Janet.

"Most wives are opposed to the Harvestore system, but I was the one who called the salesman," says Janet. "And I actually signed the agreement a couple of hours before Irvin did."

She related the idea of sealed storage units to canning tomatoes or preserving other vegetables. "It stands to reason that sealed units would work the same with forages," she says. "But the trick is getting good quality forage into the top."

But Irvin agrees that he too likes the idea of putting forage in the top and taking it out of the bottom. "If I put up another type of structure, it will be another sealed unit," he adds.

But adding another storage unit, or putting up a calf and heifer barn or purchasing computer feeders — all of which Irvin has considered in his efforts to maintain a modern dairy operation — is easier said than done in these tough economic times.

"We'd like to keep everything right close," explains Irvin about his need to have housing for heifers that are now down at a rented farm, "but money is tight and you don't know what this milk market is going to do. We have enough trouble keeping up without expanding and taking more risk."

Bringing up production

So, just like most dairymen today, along with their commitment to farm, the Reynolds had to make a commitment to increasing the herd's productivity. Quality forages is just one small part of the formula.

"Better breeding, better feeding, lots of work, and lots of hours," is how Irvin sums it up.

"We believe in using top bulls," he says. "I started out by attending an ABS breeding school. I do most of my own breeding, using mostly ABS and Sire Power, but also some Atlantic and Select Sires bulls."

For their "clean-up bull" Irvin raised a Columbus bull out of one of the top cows in the herd. "We get some pretty nice heifers out of him," he adds.

The dam of the Columbus bull, the highest producer in the herd, died this fall, much to Irvin's dismay. They weren't sure whether she had pneumonia or heart problems, explained Janet, but they had been hoping to start a bloodline with her.

With a record of 32,133 pounds milk, 1,039 pounds fat, and 994 pounds protein, she was the high cow for milk in Northumberland County last year.

One of the cow's daughters, milking for a only a few months, is projected for 17,877 pounds milk and 606 pounds fat in her first lactation.

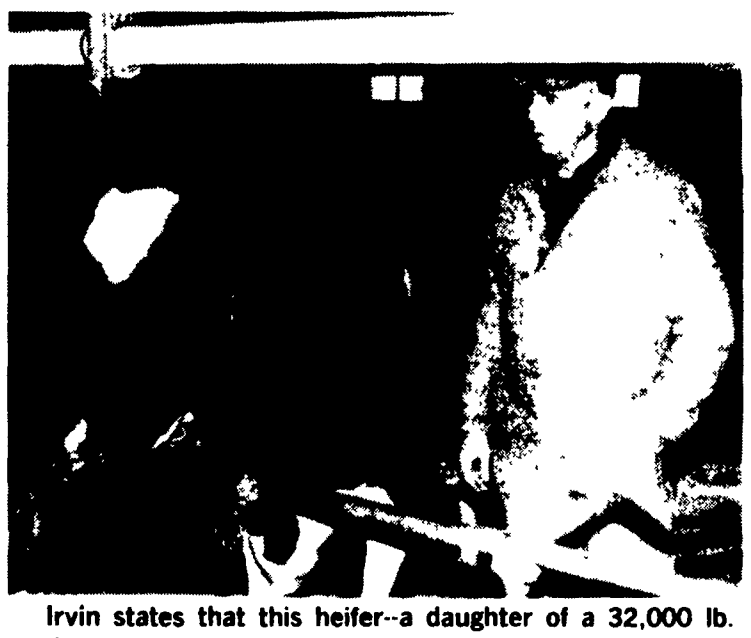
Along with good breeding, says Irvin, goes good feeding. For the second month in a row, the 40 cows in the Reynolds' high cow group have milked over 103 pounds a piece.

They are fed a total mixed ration, says Irvin, receiving 40 pounds of haylage, 26 pounds of high moisture corn, and seven pounds of concentrate, along with salt and minerals. Right now the concentrate ratio is 3 pounds of soybean to every pound of distiller, he adds.

Cooperating couple

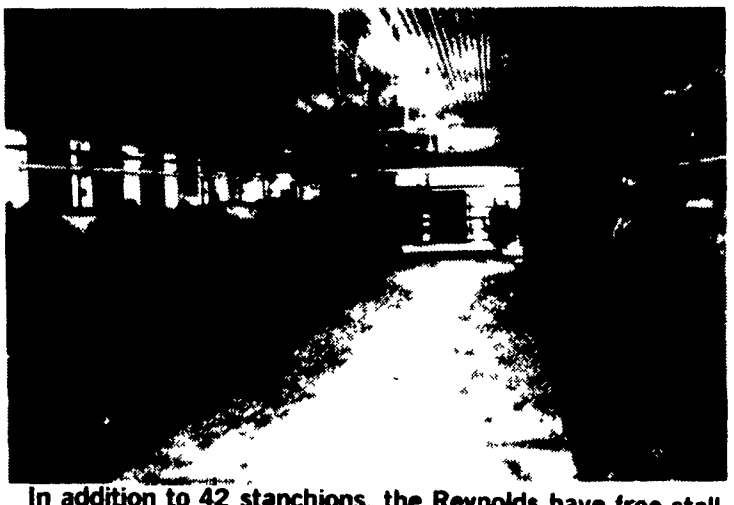
Irvin and Janet Reynolds are content with their decision to farm.

High producer



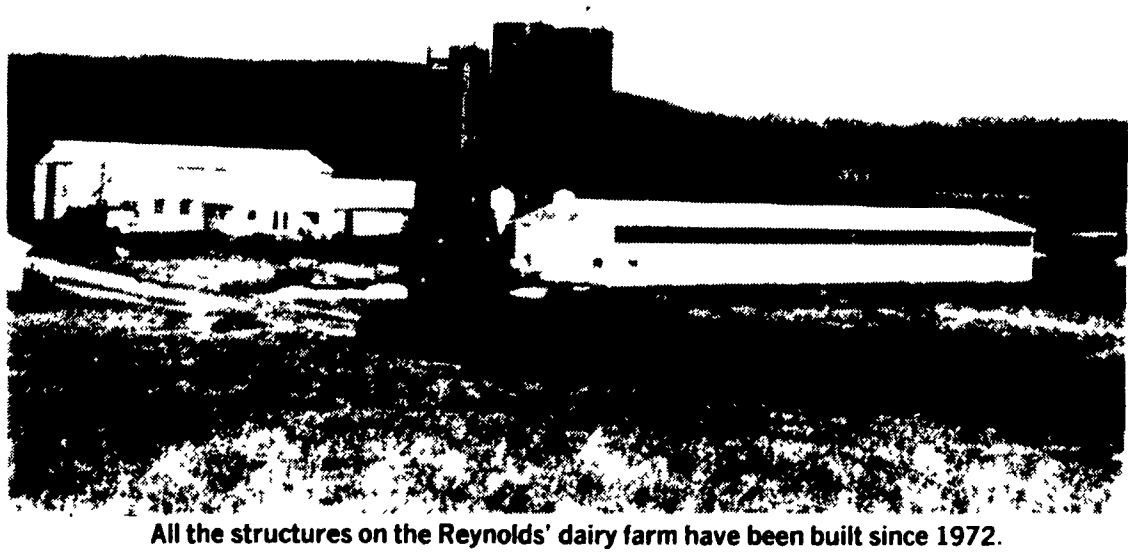
Irvin states that this heifer--a daughter of a 32,000 lb. producer--is projected at 17,877 lbs. milk for her first lactation.

Top Northumberland herd



In addition to 42 stanchions, the Reynolds have free stall housing for 80 cows.

Blue-Vu Acres



All the structures on the Reynolds' dairy farm have been built since 1972.

"We try to get our forages sampled every month, and then change the ration accordingly," he explains. Probably a fourth of the haylage is alfalfa, and the rest is an alfalfa, clover, timothy mixture.

The cows are fed six or seven times a day, or as often as they'll eat. Irvin estimates that the cows went up 5 pounds a day with the switch to TMR.

"But the real increase in production came with the shift to three times a day milking," Irvin says as he explains why they made the transition in 1982. "We had a lot of heifers fresh right then, and we knew they were going to take 50 cents. We thought we'd try to get a little more milk without investing more to make up for the deduction. Cash flow was tight."

Faced with the economic realities, Irvin says they were able to hang on. "We didn't go backwards, we stabilized ourselves." Being stabilized financially meant a hefty increase in herd production. In two years, they experienced a 4,000 pound per cow increase, and in 1983 the Reynolds earned the most improved herd for milk award in the county.

Of course, milking three times a day meant more labor, on top of Irvin's philosophy of "lots of work and lots of hours." Fortunately, the Reynolds were able to pick up the manpower they needed — much as they have over the past twelve years.

"Many hands"

"I call it the 'community farm'," laughs Irvin. "We get all kinds of people around here. Everybody comes and goes and calls it home."

Although the Reynolds don't have any children, they have many hands — both young and old — that make light the work around the dairy farm. Their helpers have ranged from Irvin's 80-year-old father to teenage dairy production students from Williamsport Area Community College.

"My dad has helped out a lot, like when we're filling silo, right up until this year. At 75 I'm sure he had more ambition than men at 40," says Irvin. In addition Irvin's brothers, Earl and Emmett, pitch in. Emmett is particularly good around equipment, says Irvin, but neither one likes to milk cows.

The Reynolds have kept many of the local children and neighbors employed and occupied on the farm over the years. "We like to work with the neighbor kids," they agree. "We give them animals to show for 4-H. This gives them some pride along with the responsibilities. We see them grow up."

Washington Co. has top Farm Show market hog

BY DONNA McCONAUGHEY
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG – The Farm Show's Junior Market Hog show was topped by two first-time winners representing opposite sides of the state.

The grand champion was exhibited by Carol Griffith of Washington county. Although Carol has exhibited at Farm Show for four years, this was her first big win. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Griffith, Carol won this coveted title with her Duroc hog. The 226-pound Champion was bred on her parent's farm where they farrow about 30 Duroc and Landrace sows.

The reserve champion market hog was owned by first year 4-H member, Judy Petersheim of Chester county. Judy's "blue-back" Hamp-York cross pig was bred by Omar Beam of Elverson. Judy does not live on a farm, but raises her 4-H project animals on the Beam farm. The Beam family encouraged Judy to continue her project work into the winter with a Farm Show entry. Judy is the daughter of Walter and Lorraine Petersheim of Elverson.

Carol's entry was the champion lightweight hog, and Judy's was the champion middleweight. The champion light-heavyweight was exhibited by Julie Myers of York county.

Reserve champion light-heavyweight was exhibited by Kristine Miller of York county.

In the heavyweight division, Chris Hopple of Cumberland county claimed top honors. The reserve champion heavyweight was exhibited by veteran showman, Leslie Lazarus of Leigh county.

The reserve champion lightweight hog was owned by Phil Eby of Lancaster county.

Lebanon county 4-H'er, David Simmon exhibited the reserve champion middleweight hog.

The Showmanship contest followed type judging. Judge LaVern Weller commented on the quality of showmanship exhibited throughout the age divisions.

The first place showmen were: Todd Niebauer of Cambria county, Junior; Debbie Townsend, Fayette county, Intermediate; and Bruce Lemmon, Cumberland county, Senior.

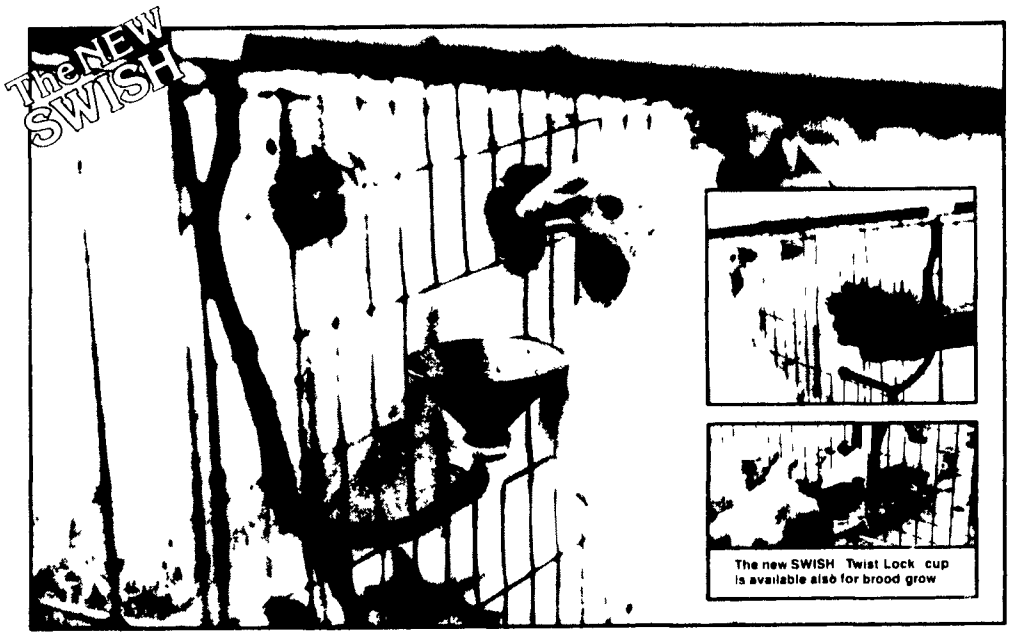
"Twist-Lock" cups: newest innovation from the new leader



...another reason SWISH saves you more labor, more birds, and more money

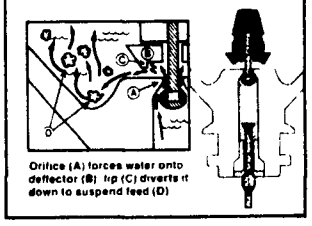
The newest twist in cage watering makes cup cleaning and maintenance a real snap It s SWISH s Twist-Lock" cups for cage layers and brood-grow watering systems

Saves labor. No more contortions with hand tools inside a cage – one simple twist of the wrist unlocks and removes the unitized cup and valve It s that easy to maintain when necessary

But, with SWISH, it s hardly ever necessary That s because our cup is self-cleaning Our patented valve keeps the cup clean by flushing any feed particles out so birds can consume them with the water

Installation is a snap too with SWISH s new cups they simply snap into the desired location and the hose attaches to the water line outlet These are some of the ways SWISH s new cup saves you labor – easy installation, low maintenance, and labor savings between flocks because our cup constantly cleans itself

PATENTED VALVE IS KEY TO OUR PERFORMANCE



Orifice (A) forces water onto deflector (B) tip (C) diverts it down to suspend feed (D)

Helps save more birds. Because our cup is self-cleaning, algae and bacteria growth is not a problem as with cups that don t flush out feed particles Clean cups mean less chance of disease and less mortality And our big cup means good access to water, for a good level of bird health

SWISH saves you money. That s the bottom line with a system that cuts labor and keeps birds alive and productive

Champion Landrace tops Farm Show Gilt Sale

BY DONNA McCONAUGHEY
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG — The sale of purebred bred gilts was topped by the champion landrace. Tunnel Hill Farm's outstanding entry brought $1100. This price broke the previous Landrace record price for a Farm Show gilt of $975 set in the 1970's.

Proclaimed by many spectators and exhibitors alike as "the best gilt in the barn" at the 1985 Farm Show, the Landrace champion also caught the eye of several prospective buyers. Bidding was fast and furious until the last two hundred dollars. The final bid was placed by Robert Fahnestock of Lititz.

The Fahnestock operation is a commercial swine unit farrowing 108 sows. Robert said, "I picked her out in the barn before the show started. I knew she was the type I was looking for."

It has been four years since he brought new bloodlines into his herd due to the Pseudorabies outbreaks in the area. Robert knew he had to make an investment in new sow lines soon and chose the 1985 Farm Show to do that. He considers the price he paid to be reasonable considering the investment it represents and the long-term potential for improving his herd.

Fahnestock also purchased the second highest selling champion. The champion Duroc shown by Clyde McConaughey will join the Landrace gilt on this Lititz farm. She carried a price tag on $700.

The reserve champion Duroc, also exhibited by McConaughey, was purchased by John Fyock of Penn Run for $400. The Duroc sale averaged $434. on 36 head.

The Landrace sale saw the reserve champion sell for $420 to William Darrow of Honey Grove. The Darrow family purchased last year's champion Landrace and also purchased another Landrace gilt in this year's sale, a Thomas Arnold consignment for $520. The Landrace sale average was $357 on 28 head.

The Darrow firm, Cedar Rows Farm, also took home the champion Yorkshire for $600 and the reserve champion for $500. Topping the Yorkshire bred gilt sale was a Smith's Hog Farm consignment. Calvin Lazarus of Lehigh county purchased her for $650. The final average for the Yorkshire sale was $362.

Sec. of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell was on hand to congratulate Eric Harnish (center) of Campbelltown, on his purchase of the champion Spotted Swine. At left is consignor Jim Parlett.

The Berkshire sale remained strong also. The champion shown by Russell and Arlie Cornbower was purchased for $600 by Dennis Grumbine and Harry Bachman. The reserve champion Berkshire sold for $400 to FFA member, Brian Fleming of Homer City. Berkshire breeders sold 15 gilts for an average of $322.

A young 4-H and FFA member also purchased the champion Spot bred gilt. Eric Harnish of Campbelltown paid $570 for this Jim Parlett consignment. The reserve champion Spot sold for $410 to Larry Robinson of Delta. Spotted Swine quantities were increased this year with 38 head selling for $290.

Phil Frieling and Sons Inc. of Hegins, purchased both the champion and reserve champion Hampshires from exhibitor John Strawbridge. The selling prices were $530 for the champion and $450 for the reserve. Frank Feeser of Taneytown, Maryland purchased a Smith's Hog Farm consignment for $530 to match the price paid for the champion. The Hampshire sale average was $348 on 21 head.

The champion Poland China sold for $460 to Randall Goff of New Oxford. Julie and Brandi Mikesell, Indiana county 4-H members, purchased the reserve champion for $335. The Poland sale averaged $273 on 13 head.

Rodger Bankert of Hanover purchased the champion Chester White bred gilt for $450. The reserve champion sold for $290 to John Bronson of Western Pennsylvania.

Although consistent throughout all breed sales, the average prices paid seemed to show caution on the part of buyers.

Pa. FFA Proficiency Award Winner

David Rice persists in dairy production dream

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

KEMPTON – Last week at the Farm Show, FFA youth from throughout the state were honored for their progress and skills in selected branches of agriculture. A young dairyman from Kempton, R1, was awarded the FFA State Proficiency Award in dairy production. For his progress after a humble beginning and for his persistence in operating his own dairy farm, David Rice, Jr. was recognized above all others in dairy production.

Rice currently operates and maintains a farm that was purchased by his father, David Rice Sr., because of the young Rice' dairy ambitions. Although his father does not work on the farm, Rice is appreciative of all the part-time help he gets from his mother, Gloria, his 16-year-old brother, Dan, and his 14-year-old brother, Don. "I'm the only full-time employee," Rice states. "I like cows and I like to milk," he adds.

"I think if you are going to farm, full-time is the only way to do it." He adds, however, that he never has as much time as he would like to spend with his animals.

Rice's dairy career did not begin with his own farm however. All through high school he received invaluable practical experience working on a neighbor's dairy farm. His own herd and farm was just a dream.

In 1980, a farm previously operated by his grandfather went up for sale, and Rice, Sr. purchased it in hopes that one of his sons would someday farm it, a dream of his own that was never realized. "At that time," David Rice, Sr. says, "we had a long discussion on the family future." The elder Rice agreed to finance "the dream" and the boys would provide the skills and the labor to make it pay for itself.

"It's paying for itself now," young Rice says of his dairy farm. He is noticeably proud of the progress he has made as he tries to hold down debt load and daily expenses.

Debt load was held to a minimum when steers were raised in the barn that first year to keep heat in the barn. Rice then began purchasing dairy heifer calves to raise for a milking herd in two years. Calves were selected from neighboring farms, dispersal sales, and local auctions. Half of the current herd is from those initial purchases, and today there is an animal at two years of age with 18,346 pounds milk and 616 pounds fat that was purchased at a local market and auction.

There are currently 37 milking cows in Rice's Albany Farm herd. When his first DHIA herd average was computed in March of 1984, after one full year on test, his average was 13,751 pounds of milk, 3.1% test and 425 pounds butterfat. With almost one more year of testing under his belt, Rice has increased the average of 14,803 pounds of milk, 3.7%, and 544 pounds butterfat.

The cows - the majority of which are two and three-year-olds are currently averaging 51 pounds a day and Rice is looking forward to higher production and more time to spend with the herd.

Rice culled hard his first year of milking. Although he was able to buy animals for a lower price as calves, he admits that many had to be culled because of three quarters, mastitis, or just poor production. But many of the animals that round out the current Albany herd were the registered project calves of his 4-H and FFA days, and his brothers had their own animals to place in the herd.

The Rices maintain that it was more practical to begin in this manner, "instead of starting out with real good animals and inexperienced people."

With the herd being raised, the Rice brothers set out to remodel the barn and rework the crops. "It was David's ideas," the senior Rice states proudly of his son's changes.

They changed the barn, adding more stanchions and a pipeline milking system. A barn cleaner and an outside bunk feeder were also added. "He appreciates this barn cleaner real well," Rice's father smiles.

Rice also worked out a crop rotation system so that enough alfalfa and corn could be grown on their 200 acres to supply the needs of the herd. Additional barns and pasture land were also rented so that heifers could be raised better and more efficiently. A silo was purchased and the daily ration was adjusted so that a minimum of supplement had to be purchased.

As these changes were implemented, Rice was able to experience production changes in the herd and learn first-hand of additional methods he could use to improve his dairy.

Dan and David both have a lot of enthusiasm for dairying, even on cold winter days.

David and Dan Rice stand by some of their work. David built the hayrack and the gates, which make separating the cows easier.

David Rice stands with one of his favorite producers, Lotus. Currently milking 88 pounds a day, Lotus is projected to 18,455 pounds of milk on her second lactation.

"I think the biggest thing is just to feed more times a day," Rice states. "We were constantly changing the ration before," he continues. "We're able to stay constant now."

He feeds milking animals five times a day. They receive grain, supplement, haylage, corn silage, and dry hay throughout the day. About the radical improvement in the butterfat test, Rice says, "it helps the butterfat to feed hay right before we give grain. I think the ear corn helps too."

Rice states that they're raising better replacements now too. Because they are getting fed better, heifers are freshening at 1100 pounds instead of 900 pounds. The herd average climbed when the initial first calf heifers freshened again as three-year-olds, and when the growthier two-year-olds were added.

Rice also gives much credit to good quality forages and the help of his neighbors to harvest it. "We're the labor force and they're the equipment," he states. "We work well together. We got a lot of good quality forage in because of that," he adds, referring to the cooperation they have with their neighbors.

As 1982 high school graduate, this young dairyman credits his father for teaching him many of the building skills he needed for the improvements in the farm buildings. Rice and his brother, Dan, are working on a heifer building now, following a basic VPI design. Gates and a bunk feeder were also built by Rice. He looks forward to a manure pit and a bigger barn as future projects on Albany Farm.

Rice also states that he enjoys the management sessions given by the local extension office and tries to attend as many as possible. He highly recommends the milking school and the herd health school as excellent courses for dairymen, and he looks forward to attending a manure management workshop.

From these continuing education programs, Rice developed a practice of keeping a herd notebook, and an efficient medicine cabinet. He also uses a strip cup all the time, utilizes the CMT test, and keeps his cows as clean as possible. Corn fodder and cow trainers were selected by Rice as the best, most economical choices in that area.

A fan was also installed in the older bank barn and ventilation was aided by opened windows and circulating air.

In the future Rice hopes to go to a TMR feeding program. He states that he wants to become more efficient and be able to spend more time with his cows.

"Quality, not quantity," is the key to a good herd, according to Rice. But, the young dairymen is quick to credit FFA and his parents for instilling in him the confidence and pride to make his goals become reality.

As is its manager, Albany Farm is still very young. But there is double, perhaps even triple, potential here. Dan, the younger brother, will be attending college and majoring in dairy production. David Rice will be breeding up his improved replacements, and as the brothers stated, "it's a young herd." The two brothers look forward to the increased production in their young animals when they freshen again.

This year's winner of the proficiency award in dairy production will not be found standing still. He's too busy trying out the skills he learned working for others and participating in FFA, making his goals a reality.

Here's why: Bicep gives you season-long broad-spectrum control in conventional and conservation tillage.

But, for no-till corn, combine Bicep with Princep and you'll get long-lasting, residual properties that take care of broadleafs and grasses right up to a clean harvest. Even late germinators like crabgrass and fall panicum.

It's the dependable, economical combination that's going to become your standard for no-till.

So get no-sweat, season-long broadleaf and grass control. Get Bicep + Princep.

THE FASTEST MOWER/CONDITIONERS IN THE WORLD.

When conditions get tough, the Vicon KM 241, KM 281 and KM 321 Mower/Conditioners can get your hay in the windrow at least 30% faster than any conventional system.

One reason is the unique high-speed Vicon disc-cutting system. Which won't plug. And it's so gentle on your hay crop there's virtually no leaf loss.

The Vicon eliminates the most common cutting and conditioning problems, even if it's heavy, dew-wet crop. The full-width nylon rollers provides the maximum conditioning effect on the entire crop.

Another reason is a new drive system that lets you operate non-stop. Even taking square corners with no drive line vibration or danger of failure. As a practical value to farmers, the Vicon mower/conditioners are efficient, economical and durable.

We'd like to show you how to improve your mowing and conditioning. Just contact the Vicon office closest to you.

Bradford Forest Landowners meet

BY JANE BRESEE
Staff Correspondent

WYSOX – Michael Lovegreen, district director of the Bradford County Conservation District, spoke about erosion and sedimentation control at the January dinner meeting of the Bradford County Forest Landowners Association, held at the Wysox Presbyterian Church, January 15.

"The Chesapeake Bay Study has found that much of the erosion and sedimentation problems originate with agriculture, but other activities such as earth moving during logging operations and crossing streams may cause serious trouble," Lovegreen said.

The conservation districts are now involved in handling erosion and sedimentation problems. They investigate complaints, find out who is responsible, and then help them comply with E and S regulations.

Many complaints come in the spring because stream muddying is most evident. A general permit must be obtained before any stream crossing by a logging operation can take place.

"The main point I am trying to get across," Lovegreen told his audience of nearly 50 landowners, foresters, and loggers, "is that the responsibility for pollution rests on the landowner himself. Before any major work is attempted, it is best to get an Erosion and Sedimentation Control Plan from the Conservation District."

Tom Lindstrom, president of the Forest Landowners Association, announced that the programs for the coming year are planned. The next meeting will be March 19, at the Bradford County Cooperative Extension Office in Towanda, with Lehan Power, Farm Management Specialist of the Extension Service, talking about tax laws on timber.

Other programs will include a visit to a small saw mill operator, Felling, Bucking and Scaling Timber; a whittling demonstration; and Wildlife as a Recreational Resource in Bradford County.

Membership is open to all interested people. Contact Tom Lindstrom, R.D. #1, Towanda, Pa. 18848, or Al Homan at the Cooperative Extension Office in Towanda.

Register for Del. Milkers' School

NEWARK, Del. — The Delaware Cooperative Extension Service is sponsoring a School for Milkers on February 8 at the Hartly Fire Hall, 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Anyone who is involved with the important job of milking cows, says Dean C. Belt, New Castle County Agent, is encouraged to attend.

Instructor for the course will be Dan Noorlander, who has much experience with milking equipment and instruction.

"We feel this course will bring home the importance of proper milking techniques and their effect on fewer cases of mastitis, increased milk production, lower somatic cell counts, faster milk out and longer life of rubber parts, such as teat liners, adds Belt.

Although there is no cost for the school or lunch, reservations must be made in advance. Register for the course by writing: New Castle County Agricultural Agent, Rm. 34 Townsend Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, DE 19717-1303. Or telephone 302-451-2506. Registrations are needed by February 1.

Reynolds dairy

In addition, in 1983 Irvin and Janet brought in two college students studying dairy production at WACC. The couple agrees that it was quite an experience to have two teenage boys living with them, but the adjustment was well worth it for everyone concerned.

"I like to say I'm a poor boss," says Irvin. And Janet interjects, "He's too likeable to be a good boss. Everybody can get along with Irvin." But, he continues, "I make sure they like what they're doing, they're not just here for a job or just for the money. People around here have had that good attitude; I guess that's the secret."

And although Janet works away full time, she helps out as needed, too. And Irvin is quick to point out that she's an integral part of the operation. "I appreciate how she backs me up," he affirms. "If it wasn't for us cooperating together we wouldn't be able to continue."

Their cooperation and commitment spills over into their involvement in other activities. As well as being active in church and Young Farmer programs, the Reynolds have served on the SUN Area Dairy Princess Committee and are strong supporters of dairy promotion and the stepped up advertising programs.

"We have to promote," says Janet, "and our little way is to stay active in the dairy princess program." Janet does her part for promotion too by taking milk punch to work — "They laugh, but it tastes good," — and by hosting school children from Williamsport at their farm.

These days Janet is thinking, too, that after 23 years of working away, maybe she'd like to return to the farm and her home full-time, just as Irvin did. But regardless, the Reynolds will keep on farming.

"My brothers razz me about the farm, tell me I'm crazy for being in debt and working seven days a week," concludes Irvin, "but they like the farm all right." Like he says, you're born and raised with it, and once it gets in your blood, you'll do anything to keep at it.

Berks awarded top Farm-City honors

HARRISBURG — Berks County earned the state's first-place award from the Pa. Farm-City Council last week at Farm Show. During the Secretary of Agriculture Night program on Monday evening, three county farm-city councils were recognized for their year-long program efforts to bridge the gap between rural and urban populations.

President of the Berks Farm-City Council is Joe Ruth, Fleetwood. Second place county in the Farm-City awards competition was Franklin County, while the Lebanon County Farm-City Council earned the third place award.

Also recognized was Clifford W. Tinklebaugh, a Susquehanna County dairy farmer who took individual farm-city honors, and the Pa. Department of Agriculture for its efforts as an organizaation.

Clyde Myers, Berks County Extension Agent, reviewed the history of the Berks farm-city activities. "We began our coordinated effort in 1981, when we developed the county Farm-City Council," said Myers. "We invited all the farm organizations, agribusinesses, and local media to become involved on the council."

Berks County's first major effort came in 1982 with Ag Day on Penn Square, held in downtown Reading. In 1983 the Ag Day activities were expanded. Events varied from a milking contest and a pig diapering competition to educational exhibits by ag organizations to "sheep to shawl" demonstrations.

"In 1984 we added the 100 pound porkburger to our ag day program," continued Myers. "Basically Ag Day is a showcase of agriculture for those who never see animals or get out to the farm.

"We also try to get local celebrities involved, to give a little more life and interest to the event." The Berks County programs, such as Ag Day, also get a lot of coverage from the press.

In 1983 the Berks County Farm-City Council offered members of the Chamber of Commerce a trip out to the farm, and then in 1984 this was expanded, allowing the city folks to be a farmer for half a day.

The most exciting addition to last year's program was a farmer-businessman exchange. Businessmen taking part in the program were Floyd Smith, president of Metropolitan Edision, David Ruffer, president of Albright College, and WEEU newscaster Charlie Adams. They exchanged positions with dairy farmer Clarence Sattazahn, Womelsdorf, beef producer Dennis Manbeck, Robesonia, and swine producer Mike Moore, Oley.

The switch was made in October and November, and highlights of the successful program were shared at the county Farm-City banquet. Around 325 rural and urban representatives came together at the banquet, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce' Agri-Business Committee, and viewed slides of the farm-city interchange.

The success of their farm-city programs, said Myers, is that the Berks Farm-City Council is an umbrella organization, enabling the different farm organizations to work together to get more mileage from their programs, yet still allowing them to "do their own thing."

Other county farm-city groups offer similar programs to promote rural-urban relations. Ten county farm-city councils submitted scrapbooks for this year's statewide awards competition.

of Narvon, was a comparative bargain for Fox, whose $40 bid for the 126-pound champion was $20 under his own Farm Show record set last year. Helping to drive the lamb to the $40 mark was contending bidder Willie the Butcher.

"It's for a good cause," said Fox after making his final bid, adding that he had come prepared to top his 1984 record if necessary. This was the 10th Farm Show champion lamb for Fox's Market.

The 132-pound reserve champion lamb, shown by Julie Kuzemchak of Centre County, went for $8 per pound to Herry Kuvkendall of Lebanon, Virginia.

Hatfield Packing came to the sale prepared to take home the bacon, and went home with both the grand champion and reserve market hogs. Carol Griffith found her long trip from Washington County to be profitable when Hatfield drove the price of her champion to $9.50 per pound. The 226-pound porker netted her $2,147.

First-year exhibitor Judy Petersheim of Chester County wasn't far behind, selling her reserve champion for $8 per pound.

The sale' per-pound average for the 100 steers sold was 92.5 cents, with 203 head of swine going for 78 cents a pound. The 109 market lambs offered averaged $1.79 per pound. All averages include prices paid for champions.

Danny George (left) of George's Foodliner, Bethlehem, took home Kelly Rohrer's grand champion steer for $8.50 per pound. With Kelly is her uncle, Abe Flory.

"Large Dairy Herd Management Conference" scheduled

ITHACA, NY – Farmers throughout the Northeast who own large dairy herds will have a chance to brush up on their management skills at a three-day conference to be staged by Cornell University in Syracuse, February 4-6.

To be held in the Sheraton Inn, the "Large Dairy Herd Management Conference" is sponsored by the department of animal science in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell.

The first conference of its kind presented by Cornell, the meeting is aimed at farmers who own large herds, according to J. Murray Elliot, chairman of the department of animal science.

"The idea of having such a conference came out of discussions among dairy farmers, Cooperative Extension agents, and Cornell personnel," Elliot says. "If this conference is successful, it may become an annual event."

The Syracuse conference will feature sessions on animal nutrition and health, personnel and financial management, and integrating farm resources to manage the dairy farm.

The session on nutrition and health will include talks on implications of biotechnology in dairying, the latest research developments in mastitis control, integrated large herd health, reproductive management, treatment of reproductive failures, and strategies for managing large dairy operations.

Topics featured in other sessions will deal with personnel management strategies and approaches to employee compensation, financial stress on American agriculture, farm business decision, maximizing returns over feed costs and from the crop enterprise, and integrating methane production and irrigation systems.

A dozen Cornell specialists in animal science, agricultural economics, agronomy, and veterinary medicine will be among the speakers. In addition, the conference features 11 guest speakers, including four dairy farmers, a fruit producer, a veterinarian, an accountant, a representative of a dairy organization, and scientists from universities in Florida, Minnesota, and Ohio.

N.Y., N.J. milk $13.38 for December

NEW YORK — Dairy farmers who supplied milk plants regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during December 1984 will be paid on the basis of a uniform price of $13.38 per hundredweight. Market Administrator Thomas A. Wilson also stated that the price was $13.91 in November 1984 and $13.07 in December 1983. The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

The seasonal incentive plan does not affect the uniform price for the month of December.

A total of 16,614 dairy farmers supplied the New York-New Jersey Milk Marketing Area with 917,150,011 pounds of milk during December 1984. This was a decrease of 4.1 percent (about 39 million pounds) from last year. The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $126,491,277.47. This included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not voluntary premiums or deductions authorized by the farmer.

Regulated milk dealers (handlers) used 391,224,344 pounds of milk for Class I, 42.7 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low test, and skim milks. The call provision which was in effect for the month required handlers to meet a minimum Class I-A utilization of ten percent. For December 1984, handlers paid $14.89 per hundredweight for Class I milk compared with $14.77 a year ago

The balance (525,925,667 pounds or 57.3 percent) was used to manufacture Class II products including butter, cheese, ice cream, and yogurt. Handlers pais $12.58 per hundredweight for this milk.

The uniform price is basked on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat. For December 1984, there was a price differential of 16.7 cents for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 percent standar.

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk received within the 201-210 mile zone from New York City.

Md. offers innovative dairy reproduction workshops

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Despite computerized feed rations and sophisticated artificial insemination techniques, one problem in the nation's dairy cattle herds has gotten worse during the last 15 years.

Dairy experts label the problem as reproductive inefficiency, and farmers complain about "poor breeders" in their herds.

But whatever its name, the economic input is staggering. Some $8 million is lost annually in Maryland alone. This amounts to $66 per cow, or $5,000 per dairy farm says Dr. Mark A. Varner, an Extension dairy management specialist and assistant professor of animal sciences at the University of Maryland in College Park.

When dairy cows don't get pregnant on a regular schedule, a herd fails to achieve its most profitable level of milk output. This inefficiency in production accounts for two-thirds of the monetary loss attributed to reproductive problems, Dr. Varner commented. The balance comes from increased artificial breeding fees and veterinary payments.

Reproductive inefficiency has gotten worse during the last 15 years, he explained, because of the trend toward larger dairy herds and more cows per farm worker. As a result, most cows today don't get as much individual attention as their dams did.

But hope is around the bend. New techniques have been developed for dealing with the problem. And the federal Food and Drug Administration recently has approved some new drugs for use in lactating cows with reproductive problems.

Information on these new drugs and techniques will be included in a series of educational workshops being conducted across the state this winter by the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service.

The workshops will kick off Phase III — or the third year — of Profitable and Efficient Production (PEP), an ongoing statewide Extension educational program for dairy farmers.

Phase I of the program, which began in 1983, emphasized dairy cow nutrition. And it introduced UMDAIR, the University of Maryland computerized least-cost ration formulation program. UMDAIR is estimated to have saved Maryland dairy farmers $1.2 million in feed costs during fiscal year 1984, according to Dr. E. Kim Cassel, Extension dairy nutrition specialist at the College Park campus.

Phase II of the Maryland PEP program got under way last year. It emphasized milk quality improvement through reduction of mastitis infections in dairy herds. There has not been sufficient time to measure the economic impact of this campaign.

But a significant number of farmers who attended the 1984 winter workshops indicated that they would make changes in their milking practices, reports Dr. Robert R. Peters, Extension milking management specialist at the University of Maryland.

Planning for this year's Phase III educational campaign was begun two years ago by Dr. Varner and Dr. Joe E. Manspeaker, an Extension dairy cattle veterinarian at the College Park campus. Dr. Manspeaker is an associate professor in the Virginia-Maryland Regional College of Veterinary Medicine.

Their campaign is an improved version of similar programs offered a few years ago by Cooperative Extension Service specialists in Pennsylvania and Indiana. For one thing, it will be a more in-depth effort than anything previously offered to farmers along this line.

But the biggest plus for the Maryland program will be a first-of-its-kind manual titled Dairy Integrated Reproductive Management. Published in December 1984, the looseleaf manual contains a series of 26 fact sheets authored by dairy science specialists at land-grant universities throughout the Northeast. It was edited by Dr. Ellen R. Jordan, and Extension dairy specialist at West Virginia University. The fact sheets are intended for annual updating.

Already the manual has been sold in 44 states and seven foreign countries, Dr. Varner reported. Portions are being reprinted as feature articles in Hoard's Dairyman, the nation's largest and most well-known dairy periodical.

The manual will be used as a text for this winter's PEP educational workshops in Maryland, and all participants will receive a copy for their personal use.

Varner emphasized that the goal for this year's educational workshops is not how to breed cows artificially. Rather, it is to help farmers put together a total reproductive management program which integrates herd health, nutrition and genetics.

Among the new developments to be introduced at the Maryland Extension workshops is a procedure which permits hormone levels in milk to be measured at the farm. This enables producers to determine stage of the estrus cycle for individual cows. Armed with such knowledge, farmers can make more effective use of prostaglandins and other permissible drugs.

The enzyme assay process for measuring hormone levels in milk has been dubbed with the acronym, ELISA. Maryland is one of the states where its practical use is being pioneered.

During the past two years, the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station has allocated $20,000 for developing the process. Money came from the Avrum Gudelsky Research Fund which supports veterinary and agriuclural research at the University of Maryland.

New Clearfield Extension Agent promotes ag, tourism

CLEARFIELD — Clearfield County has found a unique way to relieve some of the area's unemployment by hiring Pennsylvania's first Extension agent for county agriculture and tourism development.

"It's a position created to help develop jobs and generate enthusiasm in Clearfield," says newly appointed extension agent Ronald C. Anderson. "(The position will also help) get people in the local tourist businesses and service industries to offer a better service."

Anderson will study available markets and possible farming projects. Although large business is being considered, he says his programs will be aimed at the small-farm operator.

"My goal is to find ways to develop income from within the county," he says. "There are not enough ways now."

Clearfield's groundbreaking approach to its unemployment problem was devised by Clearfield County Extension Agent Harold R. Bock and a citizen's group called the Agriculture Development Council. The council realized the county "needed an individual to handle agricultural development," Bock says.

Funding for the position was the biggest hurdle. Bock says Penn State's Cooperative Extension Service agreed to put up half the money for the position and project, and suggested that the Clearfield council try the state's Ben Franklin Partnership Grant office for the other half.

Bock and the council discovered that the second half of the funding could come through the Entrepreneurial Development section of the Ben Franklin Partnership Grant program if the money was used only for agricultural development. The council agreed to fund tourism efforts through other means.

Although Ben Franklin grants didn't fund the full amoung requested, Bock says, $5,160 was allotted for Clearfield last spring.

"Ben Franklin officials said they would like to see more funding on the local level," Bock says, "and the county commissioners' office has agreed to help." The effort will also be supported by donations from local businesses.

After funding was set, Bock and Anderson mapped out plans for their objective: more agriculture jobs and business for Clearfield. By the end of January, the agents will have "a package of five or six major projects we want to develop," Anderson says.

"Projects will be created to stir up interest," Bock adds. "Our objective is to put bucks in the pockets of the people here."

For example, Bock and Anderson see the possibility of three small-animal projects for Clearfield. Since acres of county land were abused by strip mining, Anderson sees the possibility of developing reusable land for sheep raising. Chickens can be raised on small private farms for white-skinned meat–a mainstay of fast-food chains. Rabbits could be raised for meat or pelts on smaller farm properties.

The success of any project considered, however, depends on "the potential markets for the products or service we decide on," Anderson says.

When Anderson and Bock settle on a desirable market, their next step is to generate program support through the county. Anderson hopes to light a fire under agricultural group members, vocational agriculture teachers and 4-H representatives.

Tourism is another matter. Instead of establishing of new tourist attractions, both extension agents want to promote what is already in Clearfield.

"Besides a major fair, we have an antique car show, flea market and an assortment of craft shows," Anderson says.

No projects have been completed yet, but Clearfield natives have backed Bock and Anderson's efforts so far.

"People here have been very receptive," Bock says. "They want to do anything to generate employment."

USDA consolidates transportation functions

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Department of Agriculture is continuing the consolidation of its transportation activities with the shift of additional traffic management responsibility to the department's Office of Transportation.

The change moves the traffic management functions of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service to the Office of Transportation. Those functions include developing programs for the inland transportation of commodities, analyzing and evaluating freight rates and providing technical assistance.

"The integration of the traffic management branch with our office will increase our effectiveness in carrying out USDA's transportation policies," said Martin Fitzpatrick, director of the Office of Transportation.

"It will also permit us to more efficiently manage USDA's overall transportation program, which helps provide American agriculture with adequate and cost-effective systems for moving commodities," Fitzpatrick said.

The Office of Transportation was formed in 1978 from the transportation components of six USDA agencies. It assists agricultural and rural communities in maintaining viable means for shipping their products both domestically and internationally.

Farmers Union

possible referendum with mandatory participation if a majority of producers were shown to favor such a program.

Carpenter expressed scepticism with the administration's ability to produce a beneficial farm bill in 1985, and pointed out that, with "tens of thousands" of farmers in serious financial trouble right now, the foreclosure issue needs immediate attention.

"We need to initiate action for distressed farmers right now," said Carpenter, adding that there are many farmers who won't make it to this year's planting season if no financial help arrives.

"There's not a week that goes by that somebody doesn't call me to say that they've just filed bankruptcy," said Carpenter, "adding that, "Our whole rural community is starting to fall apart."

To alleviate the financial crisis, Carpenter called for a moratorium on foreclosures for 120 days, with lenders agreeing to restructure their loan programs. He suggested that the state could be responsible for interest accrued during the initial 60-day period, with the lending institutions involved picking up the interest tab for the final 60 days.

Though such measures are admittedly short-term, they would allow farms to get crops in the ground this spring, says Carpenter.

Over the long term, NFU maintains that existing loans should be rescheduled for longer periods and interest rates must be lowered where deemed necessary. Deferral of payments to a later date should also be considered when farm income is insufficient to meet obligations.

The NFU leader pointed out that the sale of commodities at market-clearing prices must be implemented only as national policy to be successful.

"We're told we have to compete (with foreign commodity prices). Do our banks want to compete? Do our land-grant universities want to compete?," Carpenter queried, emphasizing that agriculture must not be singled out to bear the entire burden of competition.

Carpenter also stated that encouraging outside investment to shore up a saging agricultural economy is a mistake. He said that investors who offer farmers attractive sums of money for their farms, then permit them to stay and continue production, are undermining the country's family farm structure.

"They used to call that serfdom," Carpenter said angrily, adding that such a financial arrangement amounts to nothing more than prostitution.

Not optimistic about the outcome of Farm Bill '85, Carpenter fears that farmers may have to settle for an extension of farm legislation now in force unless the administration reverses its "indifferent attitude" toward the agricultural community.

Also addressing the Pennsylvania delegation was NFU legislative assistant, Ruth Kobell, who, like Carpenter, expressed fears for the country's heretofore stable family farm structure.

Other featured speakers during the two-day policy-drafting convention included Hon. Don Bailey, Pa. Auditor General; DeVon Woodland, president of the National Farmers Organization; William Matson, president of the Pa. Rural Electric Association; and Orville Carver, state director of Pa. Green Thumb, Inc.

In other convention developments, PFU presented its annual Golden Triangle Awards in the fields of education, legislation and cooperation.

Recipient of the education award was Frank Goodlander, Lewisberry, for his contributions to the public's understanding of agriculture through his wild horse and burro adoption center. Goodlander recently completed a term as chairman of the agricultural advisory committee to the Dept. of Environmental Resources.

Allen Deiter, Northumberland, received the legislation award for his lobbying efforts with the PFU's legislative committee.

Receiving the cooperation award was Arden Tewksbury, Meshoppen, for representing PFU at National Farmers Organization meetings and at a variety of dairy policy meetings as well.

Also, three outstanding members were presented with PFU's Special Services Award. The recipients were: David Stetler, Mifflintown, president of the Union's Perry-Juniata County organization; Jack Rynd, Cochranton, president of the Union's Crawford-Venango County organization; and Sam Reed, Avis, retiring president of the Clinton-Centre County organization.

A non-profit family farm-oriented organization, the Pennsylvania Farmers Union serves more than 4500 family farmers throughout 31 chartered county organizations in Pennsylvania. The National Farmers Union consists of 24 state affiliates.

National Farmers Union legislative assistant Ruth Kobell fields a question during PFU press conference Wednesday. NFU and its state affiliates stand firmly opposed to any reduction in programs aimed at aiding farmers.

Vo-ag study

the figures are a dependable indication of enrollment in the vo-ag program.

Case attributed the decrease in membership in part to the overall decrease in secondary enrollment, which has decreased by about eight percent nationwide since 1980.

Charles Lebo of the Pennsylvania FFA Association said FFA membership in the Keystone state has been decreasing by about two percent or 200 members a year for the past three years, but noted that this is nearly equal to the decrease in total enrollment at the secondary level in the state.

However, Case also expressed "a concern that we may be losing the interest of the students in ag because they don't understand the occupational opportunities in agriculture."

Case said the national trend in agriculture has been toward fewer but larger farms — farms that will probably adopt the latest technology, thus having an impact on local agribusiness operations.

With the changes in ag, Case continued, comes a change in career opportunities, and it is the intent of the vo-ag program to prepare students to fill the vacancies in the agricultural community.

By studying where ag is heading in the future, the Council intends to make changes in the vo-ag program so it "can serve these kinds of ag needs and create greater interest in ag occupations," Case said.

Lebo agreed with Case that agriculture is changing and said that each state is trying to meet the needs of the industry. "We need to change with the technology," he said.

And, he said, the information the study will provide should be helpful in planning the necessary changes in the vo-ag program.

"I think it's going to make more people aware of what's needed," he said.

The study will be sponsored primarily by the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Education and will be conducted by the National Academy of Sciences.

When signing the agreement to carry out the study, Agriculture Secretary John Block voiced his support for the program and for the study. "We have seen a lot of specialization and change in agriculture in my lifetime to date. We are going to see much, much, more in the future. We need to have an agricultural industry that is supported and backed up with an educational program that can meet the needs in the future as we have been successful in meeting the needs in the past.

"I don't think we know for sure what changes are in the offering, but I know we need to be flexible and look towards change to address a new future, a future that we can only speculate about. But we need to do the best we can in charting the right kind of course."

Hay producers, marketers seminar Feb. 7

HARRISBURG — In most years, alfalfa is one of the most profitable uses of an acre. In addition to on-farm use, there is a lucrative market for hay in surrounding counties because of the concentrated dairy and horse industries.

To help Dauphin County farmers capture this market potential, a seminar on increasing production and marketing efficiency will be held Feb. 7 in Room 309 of the Pa. Department of Agriculture Bldg. across from the Farm Show Building in Harrisburg.

The morning agenda includes these topics on hay marketing: Market Potential, Histroical Patterns, Identifying the Markets, and Hay Grading and Directories.

The afternoon agenda includes these topics on hay production: Forage Species Selection, Labor Reduction in Hay Production, and Risk Reduction in Hay Production.

The cost of the seminar is $3 which includes lunch. The seminar is partially subsidized by Hamilton Bank. Interested persons should contact the Dauphin County Extension Service phone 652-8480.

"HARVESTORE® SYSTEM HAYLAGE IS JUST PERFECT!"

Ken Crissinger, Crissinger Dairy Farm, Gratz, PA 88 Head 17,400 4% 692

"In 1965 I built my first Harvestore Structure for haylage because I got tired of losing leaves from hay baling," says Paul Crissinger. "We average over 20% crude protein on the haylage from our Harvestore Structures," adds Leon.

According to Kenny, "The moisture at 40 to 45% is perfect. If it's wetter the cows don't milk as good. We don't chop too much in the afternoon. We chop in the morning and evening and that really makes nice haylage!

Leon explains, "Six tons of soybean meal lasts us two months for our milk cows. Only cows over 50 lbs. of milk get any supplement." Kenny continues, "The top cows in our herd only get 4 lbs. of soybean meal per day. Right now we're spending $651 per month for purchased supplement. That represents only 4% of our milk check!" "Currently we're producing 8,500 lbs. of milk on 80 cows every two days," adds Kenny.

"We really like our Goliath™ Unloader," says Leon. "Kenny and I would rate it excellent in haylage. We're only on our second cutter chain and the Unloader was purchased in 1968."

"We care about your business!"

Abner Zook carves out a tree on one of his three-dimensional paintings in his Womelsdorf studio.

Homestead Notes

Amish lifestyle is the theme for many of Zook's pictures. Here he has depicted an Amish carriage shop.

Covered bridge scenes are especially popular with Zook's many customers. This particular picture can be transformed into a night scene when placed under a black light.

Abner Zook shares Amish heritage in handcrafted pictures

BY SUZANNE KEENE

WOMELSDORF — As a child growing up on a Lancaster County Amish farm, Abner Zook found many uses for the artistic talent he believes God gave him at birth.

During the Depression years when money was scarce, Zook and his twin brother, Aaron, learned to use their artistic skills to make their own toys. Using bits and pieces of wood and nails they found around the farm, the Zook twins created miniature replicas of the farm equipment that was such an integral part of their lives.

And, while at first they envied their neighbors' store-bought toys, they soon found that the neighbors spent more time at the Zook's playing with the homemade toys than they did at home playing with their own.

Today at age 64, Abner Zook is a successful artist, making his living creating unique three-dimensional paintings that depict rural and farm scenes. From his art studio in Womelsdorf, Zook explains that although he never received any formal art education, he has developed his natural ability and has found a medium in which he can express himself.

When creating his realistic pictures, Zook draws from his life's experiences, first as an Amish farmer tilling the soil with horse and plow, and later from a number of other occupations including carpenter, electrician, and orchardist.

"I have grey hair and the greater part of my life's vocation is spent," Zook says without remorse. But, he continues, "I have benefitted from all these experiences."

For example, when he was a boy, the barn burned down and he remembers the Amish community joining forces to build a new one. Today, he depicts the barn-raising scene using wood, wire, auto body filler and paint.

Just as writers use pen and paper to express themselves, Zook uses his tools to share with others his knowledge of the rural people. " The medium in my hand," Zook explains, "is chisel and brush."

Having been raised in a community where higher education — anything beyond the eighth or ninth grade — was frowned upon, Zook was left to his own devices to develop the talent he discovered early in life. "They usually say artists are born," Zook says. And while he believes that people are born with God-given talents, he also realizes that talent must be nurtured and developed.

Zook credits his parents for encouraging him to develop his talent, even though they discouraged him from pursuing his desire for more education. When Zook created a house from some old wood and a bag of nails, his father encouraged him. "Son, that house you built was quite unique," his father told him.

His father was also supportive when Zook and Aaron decided to convert an old swing hanging from the apple tree in the backyard into an airplane. Zook said he and Aaron took two boards set crosswise to create their plane and hung it with a rope. When their father saw that the rope could be a little dangerous, he went to the barn and found a heavy cable for their plane.

Around the time the twins were busy using their artistic talent to entertain themselves, tourism was making its way into the county and into the Zook home. When the tourists saw the little Zook boys out in the yard playing with their homemade toys, they wanted models to take home. "So we started making models of little horses and wagons," Zook remembers.

Now Zook says, "The toys are gone and the parents are gone, but the memory still lingers."

This huge carving has a special place in Zook's studio. It is half of a two-part display which shows two different angles of the same scene. The display comes apart so Zook can move it to display elsewhere.

And though the setting and lifestyle of his childhood has changed, it was his school and provides the subject of his work.

Zook has no regrets that his schooling was different from that of most artists and believes his informal education, which he gained from reading and experimenting on his own, has given him greater freedom to express himself.

Other artists also offered Zook encouragement and advice. One time when Zook was having a problem with a piece of his work he packed it up and took it to Andrew Wyeth. In working through the colors in one of his pictures Zook had been following "the rules" he had learned from an art book. But Wyeth advised him that there are times when an artist must abandon the rules and go with his gut instinct.

Zook recalls the meeting with pleasure and just a hint of pride at conversing with such a famous artist. Wyeth's wife was standing alongside her husband when Zook made his call, and she asked Zook, "Do you know who you're talking to?" reminding him of Wyeths' social importance.

But mainly, Zook simply steered his own course, and although he describes himself as "a bit of a misfit" in the artistic community, he has attained a certain amount of fame himself.

Today Zook's three-dimensional artwork done in bas-relief brings a fair price in the marketplace. Prices vary according to the size of the artwork, which can be as small as 12 inches square or as large as 12 feet wide by eight feet high.

"I get thousands now for what I did for hundreds," Zook says, explaining that when he first started making these paintings 25 to 30 years ago, many of them sold for $200 and $300. His work is so popular that he has a backlog of orders that will keep him busy for eight or nine years.

Tourists bought many of his first pieces and now the second generation of his first customers are coming back and buying his work to hand down as collector's items.

He takes a picture of every piece he makes and keeps a log of his buyers. "I have a pretty good record of most of them," he says.

Paging through Zook's log book, the visitor learns that each painting is unique. While many feature similar scenes, there is always something different about each one. Whether the bridge is turned at a different angle or the faces painted with different expressions, each painting has a unique scene to portray.

An especially observant visitor will also notice a set of identical twins in many of the pictures. These twins are, of course, Abner and Aaron Zook, two little Amish boys growing up in Lancaster County.

Most of Zook's paintings are imaginary, or come from his mind rather than from actual places. However, he does do some field work, reproducing real scenes in 3-D.

Zook's studio is attached to his home along Route 422 in Womelsdorf and draws many tourists and senior citizens each year. There, they are treated to walls lined with samples of Zook's work, including pictures of covered bridges, an Amish carriage shop, and other rural scenes.

His gallery also contains hand-crafted pictures that feature invisible fluorescent paint. These pictures, which look like all the others in the daylight, are transformed into realistic night scenes when placed under a black light. Moonlight shimmers on a snowy landscape while skaters take a turn on the pond, and the bright beam from a lighthouse glances off the ocean and warns ships of the jagged rocks ahead

Zook says he enjoys sharing with visitors and likes to tell them about his work and the history of his people, but he is always anxious to get back to his tiny workshop, where he carves his heritage from wood and wire

Mileage log on business travel in personal vehicles essential for taxes

NEWARK, Del. — As of Jan. 1, 1985 all personal vehicles used for business purposes must maintain a mileage log. This includes farmers who use pickup trucks and other personal vehicles in their work.

According to University of Delaware extension farm management specialist Dr. Don Tilmon, the 1984 Tax Reform Act requires that a "contemporaneous daily record" be kept on each vehicle for which a business deduction will be taken on the owner's income tax return.

The same rule applies to any other transportation equipment (such as planes or boats), any personal computer located other than in a business office, and any recreational equipment for which the owner plans to claim a partial business expense.

In general the log should contain the following information:

- Date of the trip.
- Name of the person making the trip.
- Destination and purpose of the trip.
- Beginning and ending odometer readings.
- Whether trip is business or personal.
- Any other expense information.

At present no official forms have been issued, so farmers are free to make their own or buy one from a stationery store. Copies of vehicle mileage logs are also available in Delaware from county extension offices in Newark (451-2506), Dover (736-1448) and Georgetown (856-5250).

"Remember," says Tilmon, "keeping a log in each vehicle or on any other piece of equipment that has both a business and personal use is a necessity if you expect to take a deduction on your 1985 federal income tax"

TRY MEAT SUBSTITUTES FOR A CHANGE OF PACE

Even though we all have our definite favorites, we don't really want the same food all the time, nor can we always afford it. Variety is the spice of life, so let's look at some changes you can make.

Smart shoppers and good cooks are always looking for flavorful substitutes for the usual dinner stand-by. But, many of us feel that unless we eat meat we won't get adequate amounts of protein to meet our body's needs.

Meat substitutes can easily supply adequate protein and other nutrients. Wise substitutions can also stretch scarce food dollars.

When selecting substitutes for servings in the meat group you should consider their approximate protein content. They should supply a total of 30 grams per day. For example, 2 eggs supply about 15 grams of protein, one cup of macaroni and cheese supplies 15, and cornbread and one cup of beans, supplies about 20 grams.

Meat substitues can be made up of complete proteins such as milk and eggs. They can be extended proteins–that is, milk, meat, and eggs cooked with or added to grains, beans, and nuts. They can even be a combination of incomplete proteins which together make up a complete protein. Cereal with milk, cheese pizza, rice pudding, tuna rice casserole, chili, and many other combinations are familiar extended dishes in many households. They are good and relatively inexpensive to prepare.

So are those incomplete proteins combination that supplement each other. Here's a list of hearty, inexpensive meatless dishes to help you get through the winter.

- Baked beans/cornbread
- Black-eyed peas/rice
- Beans, tortillas or brown bread
- Beans/barley soup
- Lima beans/corn
- Beans/pasta
- Refried beans/rice or tortilla
- Pita bread/chick pea puree

You may not have considered these dishes to be adequate meat substitutes, but they are. Served as part of a well-balanced menu from the four food groups, these substitutes will help you maintain your health without costing a fortune.

SAVE MONEY AND ENERGY AND BE WARM ALL NIGHT LONG

Don't be fooled by brighter days and warmer than usual temperatures. There's still plenty of furnace weather to come. Nevertheless, you can begin to cut your home heating costs now. You can save by using electric blanket or mattress pad on your bed.

Using energy to save energy can help you solve winter's puzzle. Want to know how to conserve energy, lower heating costs, and still stay warm? If you use an electric blanket or mattress pad at night, you can lower your room temperature ten degrees and stay warm and cozy.

At current electricity rates, one electric mattress pad or blanket used in a 62 degree room, and set at medium, costs about six cents a night. Eleven dollars for six month's use is considerably less than the cost of keeping your bedroom heated all night at 70 degrees.

A recent study found that if you reduce the heat ten degrees in more than two rooms each night, you can save an entire year's heating bill in about three to four years. At today's prices, that's a savings indeed.

Here are a few tips on using an electric heating blanket or mattress pad wisely:

- Do not use electrical bedding for infants, persons insensitive to heat or for those who are helpless.
- Keep all pets away. Electrical appliances can be damaged by rough use.
- Follow the manufacturer's instructions for laundering and storing.
- Keep controls away from sources of heat and away from windows. The control will think the room is warmer or colder than it is.
- Be sure to turn off all electrical bedding when not in use.
- For an extra treat, prewarm your bed by turning the control to high for a few minutes before getting into bed. Then reset the control to its normal position.

Make a meal with hamburger

Need "something" for dinner, but not quite sure just what it is you want? Slip a pound or two of hamburger from your freezer and try some of the recipes readers have shared this week.

You can select from a long list that offers ample variety for diverse tastes. We have hamburger casseroles for those of you who don't have much time to spend in the kitchen, Hamburger Sukiyaki for those who are a little adventurous, and wonderful Oven Porcupines and Tasty Hash for those on tight budgets.

Whatever your taste or situation, you're sure to find a hamburger recipe that will suit your needs.

HAMBURGER MACARONI CASSEROLE

Featured Recipe

This week's featured recipe comes from the Pennsylvania Beef Council. The following Beefed-Up Peppers recipe features a delicious way to enjoy the good taste of hamburger in a hurry.

Prepared in a microwave oven, stuffed peppers make a tasty main dish for your family.

Beefed-Up Peppers

1½ pounds ground beef
4 green peppers
½ cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 cup cooked rice
1 11-ounce can condensed Cheddar cheese soup
1 egg
¾ teaspoon dill weed
¼ cup milk
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Cut peppers lenghtwise in half; remove seeds and membrane. Place pepper cups on large microwave-safe plate, cut side down; cover with waxed paper and microwave at high for 3 minutes. Rotate plate ½ turn and continue cooking at high for 2 minutes.

Combine ground beef and onion; arrange in ring in all-plastic sieve or small colander. Place sieve in bowl, microwave at high 3 minutes. Stir to break up beef. Continue cooking on high 3 minutes; stir after removing from oven. Sprinkle salt and pepper over beef; combine with rice; ⅔ cup soup, egg and dill weed. Combine remaining soup with milk and Worcestershire sauce in glass custard cup and place in center of plate. Divide beef mixture into 8 portions, press one portion in each pepper cup, rounding the top; place in circle on plate. Microwave at high 6 minutes, rotating ¼ turn every 2 minutes. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Going to the Farm Show at Harrisburg this year was a bit different than other years. For one thing, I accidentally met my sister in the crowd and was able to show her around.

She had seen all of the animals and all of the huge machinery but wondered if there were any crafts displayed anywhere. My desire was to see the braided rugs as I've finally started another one this winter. And since my husband is a "regular" at the show, I too have been there many times and was able to act as her guide for the afternoon. She has delved into many crafts and as Christmas gifts I've received pottery, framed wild flowers, hand painted boxes, etc. I'm wondering if the show is so big that some other people miss part of it simply because they don't know where to find everything.

Another difference in the Farm Show for us this year was the opportunity to stay for the evening square dancing program. You see, many years ago we participated in the program on the dance floor. As we still belong to the Foot and Fiddle Club, hearing the familiar calls and seeing the very colorful costumes was quite enjoyable.

Allen and I have just celebrated another wedding anniversary and several friends and relatives have been kind enough to invite us to their homes for dinner to help us celebrate. We got married on a blustery, snowy day. Some guests could not get to the church and others had trouble getting home again. We also had to postpone our trip to Florida because the roads were closed due to the storm.

That year my father had steers that he watered by chasing them to the Conestoga River every day to drink and for a month he had to break the ice with an axe everyday. So when I awaken on a cold morning, I remember 37 years ago and know things could be a lot worse.

TEXAS HASH

1 pound ground beef
3 large onions, sliced
1 large green pepper, chopped
1 16-ounce can tomatoes
½ cup uncooked regular rice
2 teaspoons salt
1 to 2 teaspoons chili powder
1/8 teaspoon pepper

Heat oven to 350°F In large skillet, cook and stir meat, onion and green pepper until meat is brown and vegetables are tender Drain off fat. Stir in tomatoes, rice, salt, chili powder and pepper; heat through. Pour into ungreased 2-quart casserole. Cover; bake 1 hour. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Minus six degrees. Fahrenheit. At six in the evening. Right outside the kitchen window, protected from the prevailing winds.

Smiling benevolently, behind a facade of warm sunshine, winter slipped in a month ago, bearing downright balmy breezes and a thermometer more reminiscent of beach than ski-slope readings.

Little did we know the fury which Mother Nature was saving up to deliver in one massive, mid-January punch that wiped the slate clean of memories of earlier seasonal gentleness. Almost overnight, our immediate world became accessorized for winter.

Out came the finery of crystal fringe, hung from every roof, every rainspout, every overhang, every eave. Icicles. Each a tiny bit different, yet the same. Shining in the sun and shimmering in moonlight, they lend a fairy-tale-like, whimsical touch to the outlines of the simplest building.

Roadbanks rival the beauty of the icy outlines with their own scalloped edgings structured of layers of fine powdery snow driven by relentless, sometimes gusty and violent, winds. These drifts seem to grow like creamy fungi along the top edge of high roadbanks, inching dangerously farther and farther into an overhang that threatens to plummet at any second. Shaped in graceful, curving shapes of scalloped laciness, they form an everchanging pattern of shadow and light.

Rippling pond waters are stilled and silent beneath a thickening coverlet of ice. Its snow-sprinkled texture is rough, etched by fingers of wind sweeping down the hill and across the bleak expanse of frozen pasture. Bit by bit, these winds have eroded away tiny caverns and canyons in the snow's once-smooth surface, leaving a sort of unkempt, wrinkled effect.

Manmade accessories materialize at strange places. Feed bags blossom from cracks beside doors and windows, meager, temporary insulation against the bitterness. A propane torch waits near waterpipes encased in super-chilled concrete flooring, silent testimony to cracked-pipe repairs that demand immediate attention before other barn work can get underway on extra-nasty, sub-zero mornings. Sopping rags, soaked in hot water and wrapped around water-fountain valves, freeze into stiffness when hung to dry.

"Are you building an igloo?" queries the pre-teener, eyeing my accumulating stack of solid-ice, bucket-shaped forms, dumped from the calf kennel water buckets. He declines my offer that he be the first to use it when it's finished. Perhaps we could instead stack the foot-thick rounds in the sawdust pile, for ice-cream making in warmer weather.

While that stack grows, another diminishes. What was once a rather impressive stack of wood on the basement porch has been literally gobbled by the insatiable belly of the woodstove. Replacement piles vanish, it seems, even as we stack, carry, and stuff into the glowing cavern of coals.

One more accessory for this wicked-witch side of winter might be fun to add to our collections: tee-shirts with the message "I survived the glacial age of '85."

Having seen the thermometer dip to minus 14 before it finally started back up again, we might be better off with that slogan on insulated underwear tops.

Somerset Co. wins honors for safety program

SOMERSET – Somerset County has won top honors for its outstanding 4-H safety program.

Somerset County Extension Agent Robert C. Antram accepted a share of General Motors stock from the General Motors Foundation, given in recognition of the county's achievements. The award will be used to further safety activities among 4-H members in the county.

Forty-five counties nationwide were recognized this year in awards programs arranged by National 4-H Council. Winners were selected by the Cooperative Extension Service.

The winning Somerset County safety program focused on a Rabies Clinic Week, which 4-H'ers helped coordinate and publicize. The 4-H'ers served as clinic secretaries, veterinarian assistants, and janitors, in addition to providing information through brochures and radio talks.

The 4-H safety program is designed to teach young people how to reduce accidents and injuries through recognition and correction of hazards.

THE MICRO WAY

LANI BLOOMER

Bake a loaf of English muffins

Baking a brown crusty loaf of bread is something a microwave just can't do. But there are breads that bake well in the microwave and the English Muffin Bread featured this week is one of these. When this bread comes out of the microwave, it is white and soft, and not very good, as far as homemade bread goes. But slice, toast, and butter it...aaaahhh! The flavor and texture approach that of a good English muffin broiled with butter. It is a superb breakfast bread for toasting.

There are also ways you can use your microwave to help get that brown crusty loaf of homemade bread out of your range oven faster! Use the temperature probe to heat the liquids for the yeast. When dissolving the yeast in the liquids, heat them to 110 or 115°F. If you are using the rapid mix method of putting the dry yeast in with the flour, heat the liquids to 120°F. Do not heat the yeast in the liquids in the microwave. When I've tried this the bread doesn't rise very well.

Use your microwave as a warm cozy place for the bread to rise. Heat 1 cup of water in a measure for 3 minutes until it is boiling. Leave the water in a corner of the oven and add the dough that's ready to rise (either in the pans or a bowl). The rising times will be about the same as those listed in recipes, not longer as they usually are in a cool winter kitchen.

Use the microwave to thaw frozen bread dough quickly. Lightly grease the outside of frozen dough and place 1 loaf in a greased glass or plastic container. Cover with a lid or plastic wrap. Set the container in a larger microsafe pan and pour 1 cup HOT water into the larger pan. Put both pans in the microwave and heat on medium (50,5) for 4-5 minutes. It is important to rotate the dish ¼ turn every minute and to turn the dough over after 2 or 2½ minutes. Let stand for 10 minutes.

After standing, the dough will be warm and rising on the ends. It will be thawed, but still cold in the center. It is ready to shape and rise, or use in other recipes. Do not let the dough rise without reshaping–the center won't rise as fast as the ends and you'll have swaybacked bread! To reshape, roll the loaf flat with a rolling pin. Starting on a short side, roll the dough up tightly, pinch the ends and put seam side down in a greased pan. Let rise and bake as directed on package.

Try making the English muffin bread some wintery snowbound day. It's fun to mix up and delicious to eat. The bread is a batter bread, which means the dough is very soft and sticky and doesn't need kneading. You can mix it in your mixer, a dough hook is not necessary. A hand held mixer may not be strong enough for the end, though. Double the recipe if you want, but bake each loaf separately.

English Muffin Bread

2½ cups flour, divided
1 package dry yeast
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup dry milk powder
1 cup plus 1 tablespoons water
2 teaspoons corn syrup (or sugar)
1 teaspoon vinegar
¼ teaspoon baking soda dissolved in 1 tablespoon warm water

1. Put 2 cups flour, yeast, salt and milk powder in a large mixer bowl. Stir to combine. Put water, corn syrup and vinegar in a two-cup measure and heat to 120°F (use temperature probe)

2. When liquids are hot, put another cup of water in the corner of the microwave and heat to boiling (high for about 3 minutes). This will be left in the microwave to help the dough rise quickly.

3. Add liquids to flour and beat on medium speed for 2-3 minutes until dough is smooth, and starts to look elastic. Stir in last ½ cup of flour, stirring until smooth. Use a spoon if your mixer can't handle the dough.

4. Put the bowl of dough (leave the beaters right in it if they are large and won't disappear under the rising dough!) in the microwave. Leave the cup of hot water in the corner, to make a warm moist place for the dough to rise. Let rise for about an hour, until doubled and puffy and light.

5. Remove the dough from the oven and reheat the cup of water for about 2 minutes while you mix in the soda in step 6.

6 Add the soda dissolved in warm water and beat with the mixer or a spoon for a minute or two until the soda is well mixed in. Using a spoon or spatula, scoop or dump the sticky glob of dough (it will taste delicious, I promise!) into a greased glass or plastic loaf pan. Moisten your fingers with water and press the dough evenly in the pan (it won't stick to wet fingers). The dough will rise and cook just as you leave it, so try to smooth it out evenly! Let rise in the microwave, uncovered, for about 45 minutes until the dough just reaches the top of the pan. Remove the extra cup of water from the microwave before baking the bread.

7. Cook on high for 6 minutes, turning the pan a quarter turn after 3 minutes if the bread rises unevenly. Let stand 5 minutes, then turn out on a rack to cool. The bread will be white all over, and very soft and wet on the bottom. The top will be almost flat. When cold, slice about ½" thick for toasting. Serve toasted and enjoy!

Hint: If you are in a hurry, you can add the soda right in the first mixing step (step 3 before you add the extra ½ cup flour) if you wish, and let the bread rise right in the pan, only once. But it will not rise quite as high when baked.

Note: The cooking time in step 7 is for 600-700 watt ovens. Cook for 7-7½ minutes in a 500-600 watt oven, or 8-8½ minutes in a 400-500 watt oven.

Dairy workers plagued with 'milker's knee'

MARSHFIELD, Wisc. – Everyone knows about tennis elbow, but who has ever heard of "milker's knee"? Dairy producers may have this form of degenerative arthritis without being aware of it. The condition occurs from the squatting, bending and lifting that dairy workers must do when attaching milkers to cows standing at floor level.

Physicians at the National Farm Medicine Center in Marshfield, Wisconsin have examined farmers in various stages of the condition. Victims are often men in their early or middle forties who grew up on a farm, played football in high school and regularly milk about 40 cows. Most importantly, they squat to milk.

This wearing away of cartilage in the joints in most common among dairy farmers. The first sign is usually pain in the knees. Family and friends may notice that the person is becoming bowlegged. Other signs include frequent loss of balance, swelling, locking, stiffening, or giving out of the knees, and a grinding or snapping noise when bending.

A knee injury can predispose a person to milker's knee, but people who have never had a knee injury can be affected. Some farmers simply may have inherited the problem, especially if the family has a history of arthritis.

With a simple line of stitching, home crocheters and sewers can add the charms and elegance of crochet to curtains, draperies, towels, household accessories, clothing and craft projects.

An inexpensive and simple project for a beginning crocheter is to make a collar and cuffs that can be attached to last year's wool dress or sweater.

Clothing stores are featuring feminine lace-trimmed dresses, blouses and sweaters with sky-high price tags. Here are simple crochet trim directions and a few tips before you get started.

First of all, keep in mind that the weight of the yarn or cotton you use for the trim must be suitable for the fabric weight used in the garment. A general rule of thumb is the finer the weave or knit, the more delicate and lighter the trim.

The amount of trim needed for a "ruffle" is one and a half times the length of the distance to be covered.

When trimming with hand-crocheted or store-bought trims be sure to always prewash (or dry clean if required) before sewing on. If this is not possible, such as in the case of a gift, attach with hand-stitching and tell the recipient to remove the trim before washing. The entire effect could be ruined, as well as all your hard work, because of puckering and uneven shrinkage.

Finally, if you have an "extra-wide" piece of old lace and want to add it to a blouse or sweater, try gathering it with a contrasting ribbon and tie with a small bow for a very Victorian look.

A wonderful collection of unique crochet border designs is featured in "Crochet Fantasy," Issue No. 16, and is available by sending $3.25 to "Crochet Fantasy," Kable Square, P.O. Box 347, Department WRB, Mount Morris, IL, 61054.

Top entry brings record-breaking $600 at sheep to shawl contest

The Pick-A-Way Spinners representing Berks County won the contest with their 83" herringbone twill shawl in shades of turquoise, oatmeal and natural Corriedale fleece, an original design by team weaver Candace Franklin of Kutztown.

The team also picked up a $150 prize, a plaque and travelling trophy sponsored by the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association. Team members included Sue Hollowbush of Fleetwood, Marna Mackay of Boyertown, Shirley Waid of Oley, and Randy Stitzel of Fleetwood.

Another Berks Countian, Marvin W. Waid of Oley Engineering Associates, purchased the reserve grand champion shawl at $380 from The Bobbin Bunch. Team members received $125 in premiums for their large herringbone twill shawl with plied fringe, in shades of black walnut, browns and cream.

Team members included Betsy Johnston of Bethlehem, Northampton County; Alice Gillespie of Danielsville, Northampton County; Diane Huddleston of Macungie, Lehigh County; and Jim Shearer of Mountville, Lancaster County.

Walter M. Dunlap of Lancaster Stockyards purchased the third place shawl made by the Southern Chester County team, Good Hope Farm, for $180. The V-shaped shawl was done in Swedish lace with an asymmetrical accent band across one shoulder. Colors featured shades of rose, plum, lavender, teal and purple. A black Corriedale-cross sheep was used for the handspun weft.

Team members included Judith Pfeiffer and Toni Ammons of Landenberg, Lucy Rosen of Oxford, Elaine Staunton of Avondale, and Bill MacCauley of Atglen.

During the contest each team shears a sheep, three spinners spin the wool into yarn and a weaver weaves the new yarn into an 80"x20" shawl. After shawls are completed, each team and the judges vote for the shawl of their choice. The recipient of this year's "team choice award" was the fourth place team, The Spin Thrifts. Their shawl was purchased for $180 by Ewesful Spinnings of Oley, Berks County.

Team members included Butler Countians Ruth Schnell of Chicora, Bea Turner of Portersville, Judy Simon of Sarver, Audrey Thomas of Butler, and Carolyn Lash of Adrian, Armstrong County.

Mildred M. Bunting, editor of the "Lancaster Livestock Reporter," purchased the fifth place shawl from the Butler County Pedalers. Their plain weave border with alternating colors of spring green and white sold for $140. Team members included Blanch and Beverly Hall of Petrolia, Connie Haswell of Evans City, and Linda Gross and Carol Ann Shuler of Fenelton.

Rocky Ridge Farm of Rew, McKean County, was the third highest bidder in the contest, paying $260 for the sixth place shawl made by The Barefoot Treadlers. Their white, hickory, suede and oatmeal colored shawl was a team effort by Kathleen Liddle of Pottsville, Schuylkill County; Gail Mumma and Kathryn Otto of Jonestown, Lebanon County; June Yohn and Palmyra, Lebanon County; and Dean Ziegler of Lititz, Lancaster County.

A special feature at this year's Sheep to Shawl Contest was a team of eight youth ranging from 11-16 years old from the Butler County Cottontails 4-H Rabbit Club. The Cottontail Twisters spun a fleece and wove a scarf during the contest to gain experience. The team agreed to sell their scarf, with the proceeds going to the club treasury to pay their travelling expenses to Harrisburg. Again, Rocky Ridge Farm of McKean County topped the bidding of $250 for the 4-H'ers benefit.

Teams were judged on the following basis: shearing, 5 points; team identification, 5 points; speed, 10 points; spinning, 20 points; weaving, 20 points; and 40 points for design and uniqueness of the shawl.

Judges for the contest were Linda Berry Walker of Stockton, NJ; Pegg Poff of Cantonsville, MD; and Sunny Bixby of Verona, NY. For the fifth year, Harry Bachman of Annville, Lebanon County, donated his time as the contest auctioneer.

The Pennsylvania Sheep to Shawl Contest is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Moderate sugar intake is okay for healthy people

SOUTHAMPTON — Most of us will confess to having a "sweet tooth" despite pedagogic information that warns against overconsumption of sugar-sweetened foods. This warning is then followed by recommendations of some groups to decrease intake of simple carbohydrates (sugars) and increase intake of complex carbohydrates (starches).

As a basis for these recommendations, they say the body can distinguish between a glucose molecule from starch and one from refined sugar and other caloric sweeteners; or the body can distinguish between a sucrose molecule from fruit, and one from refined sugar and other caloric sweeteners; or refined sugars and other caloric sweeteners lack components found in complex carbohydrates or "naturally occurring" sugars; or refined sugars contain harmful substances when consumed in large amounts.

There is no evidence, says Dairy Council Inc., to support any of these assumptions.

Refined sugar and other caloric sweeteners refer to refined cane and beet sugars, syrups, corn sugar (dextrose), molasses, honey, sorghum, and maple products.

From a nutritional standpoint, refined sugars and sweeteners are not necessarily a problem for the healthy individual unless: they provide more energy than the body needs to maintain energy balance; their consumption results in exclusion of more nutritious foods to the point of an inadequate diet; and sugars are consumed in a quantity or frequency to encourage dental caries.

Dental decay occurs with the help of a glue-like substance called plaque—a thin, colorless layer of bacteria that constantly forms on the teeth. Plaque breaks down the sugars from food and changes the sugars to form acid. This sticky plaque then holds the acid to your teeth, allowing it to attack tooth enamel.

One very important factor surrounding development of dental caries is the length of time teeth are exposed to this acid environment. Determinants influencing exposure length are frequency and form of sugar consumption. The more frequently sugar is consumed, the longer the teeth are exposed to the acid environment, and the greater the chances for decay. Foods such as honey or caramel stick to the teeth and are more cariogenic because they expose the teeth to acid for a longer period of time than do foods that can be cleared from the mouth.

Dairy Council recommends eating sugared foods with a meal rather than between meals. Other foods have a buffering effect on acid production and decrease acid potential of sugar.

Empirical evidence has suggested a relationship between refined sugar and children's behavior, namely hyperactivity. Running, climbing, and fidgeting are behaviors common to all children at one time or another. The difference between the behavior of a pathological hyperactive child and one who is normal is more in degree and cause than in behavior type. Until more is learned about the actual cause of hyperactivity, there is no scientific evidence to support the theory that sugar causes behavioral disorders.

Sugared foods, of and by themselves, and consumed in moderation are not necessarily detrimental to the normal individual's health. It is recommended, says Dairy Council, that people consume a wide variety of foods from the four food groups–milk and dairy products, meats, fruits and vegetables, and grains–to ensure adequate nutrient intake without consumption of energy beyond that needed to maintain metabolic balance.

Lancaster Society 3 held their January meeting at the Zion U.C.C. church, Lincoln, on Saturday, Jan. 19.

State Senator Noah Wenger, who represents the 36th Senatorial District of Pennsylvania, was the afternoon speaker. His district, which includes parts of Lancaster and Chester Counties, is one of the fastest growing districts in the state. Wenger is chairman of the Labor and Industry Committee.

During the business session conducted by president Doris Miller, society members gave a contribution to the Lancaster County Extension Service to help a teen attend 4-H Retreat in York County.

The group also gave a donation to a local Cerebral Palsy child who needs additional operations at the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center.

Mildred Pfautz and Erla Gehman gave State Convention reports.

The members of Society 3 will meet at the home of Alice Trumbauer on Feb. 7 at 9 a.m. They will spend the day making cancer pads. Please bring a salad or dessert for the afternoon meal.

Procedure for overwintering container-grown plants

Most gardening activity at this time of the year is limited to keeping an array of houseplants alive through the winter in the hostile environment of our homes.

"Cool temperatures, low light levels and low humitity are responsible for many problems on tropical foliage plants," says University of Delaware extension plant pathologist Bob Mulrooney.

"If you're having trouble with any plant, the first thing you should know is the name of the plant and what conditions it needs for good growth. A good reference book on houseplants, your local florist and garden center operator are all good sources of information."

At this point make sure the problem is not the result of insect damage. Such clues as cottony bits may mean a mealy bug infestation; sticky sap and/or brown bumps, may indicate scales; grayish or pale green leaves could be spider mites; gnarled or stunted leaves at the growing point may indicate the presence of cyclamen mites.

But other maladies may be the result of poor winter growing conditions, the specialist says. Overall leaf drop is a common problem which may occur when you move a plant from one room to another, or drastically change its environment some other way. Chilling will cause the same symptoms.

If leaves are turning yellow and dropping from the bottom toward the top, the culprit usually is overwatering which damages the root system.

Wilting can be caused by too much water, too little water, or overfertilizing.

Leaves with brown edges may be a sign of chronic underwatering or periodic episodes of severe drying out.

"Sometimes," says Mulrooney, "the leaf-loss-from-the-bottom snydrome is the result of overwatering because a plant is sitting in too large a pot." In this case, excess soil around the roots holds too much water, leading to low oxygen levels and root rot. To avoid this problem, never put a plant into a pot more than 1 to 2 inches wider than the root ball.

"Most of the houseplant problems I see arise from some of the above factors," the specialist says. "Overwatering and subsequent root rot is by far the most frequent."

Bucks Co. IFYE returns from Germany

DOYLESTOWN – Thomas Dickson has returned to Bucks County after spending six months on an International 4-H Youth Exchange Program (IFYE) to Germany. Dickson, 21, of Richboro, lived with German families while he learned agricultural methods.

He departed in June 1984, staying first in Bavaria on a farm tht raised cattle for meat. The other type of farms that he lived and worked on included dairy farms, a swine farrow to finish operation, and a orchid greenhouse in West Berlin.

Staying with families for a three-week period enabled Tom to gain experience while sharing his American culture. He said the best thing was realizing "that people are the same throughout the world."

Dickson attended the International Rural Youth Seminar held in Munich in July. During this time, he met rural youth leaders from 32 countries.

In Germany, the IFYE program is conducted by the Federal Agricultural department. The "Landwirt-schaft" is the name for the German Agricultural Schools. These schools are for the 16-30 year olds.

Dickson toured many of these schools and met students in various parts of Germany.

Upon his return to the United States, Tom will attend Penn State University, where he is a junior studying animal production with a minor in international agriculture.

Dickson has prepared a slide program of his experiences to share with community groups. Contact the Bucks County Cooperative Extension Service at 343-2800 - Ext. 385 for more information.

Proper nutrition crucial to normal pregnancy

SOUTHAMPTON — So you're going to have a baby! If you're like other women, you believe your lifestyle will change when your baby is born. That's true as far as it goes... but, in fact, your special needs during pregnancy may represent a different lifestyle before birth ever takes place.

What are these special needs? Proper nutrition, for one thing, says Dairy Council Inc., Southampton. You've probably been told that what you eat is especially important during pregnancy. But you wonder: is it necessary to eat "special" foods during this special time?

You don't have to eat "special" foods — as long as you do eat the recommended number of servings from the four food groups each day: milk, meat, fruits and vegetables, and grains. These foods will give your body the nutrients you need for yours as well as your baby's health.

Recommended servings for the pregnant woman of the milk group are four; of the meat group (including fish, poultry, eggs, dried peas and beans, and peanut butter), three; of the fruit and vegetables group, four; and the grain group (including cereal, pasta, and rice), four.

In addition to the four food groups, there is a fifth category — "Others" — with no recommended servings. Foods like soft drinks, chips, candy, cookies, and cakes are not harmful to the body — they are just low in nutrients and usually high in calories. So eat from the four food groups first before you eat these extra foods. It should be remembered, too, that beer, wine, and liquor can harm the baby's health.

Calcium is an important nutrient throughout the life cycle — but more so during pregnancy. And government studies show that most women do not get enough calcium in their diets. Calcium intake is important because your baby's bones start out soft and elastic. They only become hard when calcium is added. Calcium also strengthens and hardens your baby's developing teeth.

If you don't get enough calcium in your diet for yourself and your baby, your body takes calcium from you bones. This can cause your bones to become thin, weak, and brittle. Milk and dairy products are the major source of calcium in the American food supply. If you have trouble digesting milk, drink small amounts with meals, choose other dairy products (cheese and yogurt), select desserts made from milk (pudding, ice cream, and custard), and eat foods made with milk products (pizza, tacos, and creamed soups).

It has been determined that the most important factor during pregnancy is adequate weight gain which, in turn, influences normal birth weight. If the mother is malnourished, the placenta must choose whether to consume nutrients for its growth, development, and survival or to transport these nutrients to the fetus. It "chooses" the former because if the placenta breaks down, the pregnancy ends. It is the transport of nutrients across the placenta that is impaired in severe maternal malnutrition — the major reason why the fetus is not properly nourished. Low birth weight has been called the major cause of infant mortality and probably the major cause of mental handicaps in children.

Though it's true you needn't eat "special" foods during this special time, Dairy Council says, it is essential that you have a proper and nutritious diet. This alone may be the most important factor for a normal pregnancy.

BIG CLOVER YIELDS?

Plant MorRed.

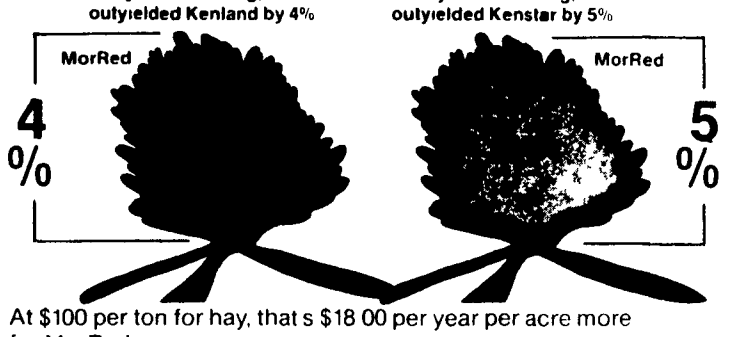
MorRed Red Clover possesses the qualities that lead toward a top yielding, short rotation hay and grazing legume.

Combined resistance to both Northern and Southern Anthracnose
Northern and southern anthracnose can kill or greatly reduce the stand life of red clover

High resistance to powdery mildew
Contributes to early fade-out and reduces feed quality

Higher yield potential than Kenland or Kenstar

In 5 years of testing, MorRed outyielded Kenland by 4%
In 17 years of testing, MorRed outyielded Kenstar by 5%



At $100 per ton for hay, that s $18 00 per year per acre more for MorRed

Improved winterhardiness
The tougher a variety, the better chance the crop has to produce throughout its expected rotation

Vigorous growth and quick recovery
The higher the disease resistance, the better the chance for the crop to fully express its potential

Seeding versatility
MorRed Red Clover is ideal for No-till pasture and meadow seedings in old grass stands Alone for hay and pasture, MorRed can also be seeded in standing small grain or on an early prepared seed bed alone MorRed can be mixed seeded with grasses and small grains as part of a rotation or seeded in combination with other legumes—especially white clover along with grasses for hay and pasture Farmers find that when used as part of a rotation red clover is helpful in building the nitrogen level for the grain fraction of the rotation

Milkers can avoid skin irritations

MARSHFIELD, Wisc. – Dairy farmers whose hands are exposed to water or various solutions for long periods of time may be exposing themselves to skin problems.

According to the National Farm Medicine Center, Marshfield Wisconsin, iodine antiseptics and even plain water can bring on conditions such as eczema. Dairy workers often have their hands in water but neglect to moisturize their skin after they finish washing the cows' udders. The skin dries out, causing redness, swelling, cracking, scaling and small water blisters that turn into scabs.

At first, hands may chap severely. Eczema can develop if the irritation continues. Farmers with sensitive skin or those who have had eczema in the past can develop it after putting their hands into water or detergent only a few times.

Although milker's eczema is not easy to cure, a 0.5 percent cortisone cream, available over the counter at a drug store, can be effective. If the problem persists, a physician can prescribe a stronger medication.

Eczema is much easier to prevent than to cure. Farmers should take a minute after washing the cows to dry their hands and apply a moisturizing lotion while their hands are still damp. Avoid moisturizing lotions with perfumes.

Wear protective, long-sleeved gloves of plastic or rubber. Use cotton liners in rubber gloves from the drugstore to protect skin. Sweaty hands in rubber gloves can be as harmful as hands submerged in water.

If a farmer who has taken precautions still gets what appears to be eczema, it could be tinea, a fungus infection. Farmers are susceptible to tinea because of the fungus on cattle. Tinea has the same cause as ringworm but a different appearance.

Ringworm develops when farmers touch areas on their cattle where the microscopic organisms live. The disease appears as one spot or several spots, and the edges of the rings are raised slightly. Ringworm itches much as eczema does, but doctors can prescribe an antibiotic cream for it.

Farmers may also have allergic reactions to ingredients in cleaning solutions or from a hand lotion with a fragrance. This forms a more uniform reaction than eczema, with redness and roughness wherever the cleaning solution or lotion has touched the skin.

Prevent disease with a health program

MEDIA – Prevention is the most powerful weapon we have against disease–especially against chronic disease. But for this is to be effective, each of us has to take responsibility for our own preventive program.

Extension home economist Greta C. Vairo says, a well-balanced preventive program can influence your health, vitality, and longevity enormously. In fact, a 10-year study at UCLA shows that a seven-point prevention program could extend the life of a middle-aged man by 10 or 11 years. A woman following the same program could add an extra seven years.

Perhaps the greatest impact prevention programs have is in the area of chronic diseases such as heart attacks, strokes, kidney diseases, and cancer. The incidence and severity of these can be demonstrably reduced by everyday decisions about diet, exercise and lifestyle. Regular visits to your doctor are a vital part of preventive program, especially if you have a chronic condition.

You may not be especially interested in longevity right now, but what about health and vitality? Just as we make decisions to overeat or lead sedentary lives, it is quite possible to make preventive decisions instead. We can change our habits for health.

Here's a list of seven points to prevention as outlined in the study, make these part of your life every day:

- Don't smoke
- Get enough sleep
- Exercise regularly
- Eat three well-balanced meals a day
- Use alcohol in moderation
- Maintain your proper weight
- Eat breakfast

Maple Producers honor Barbara Kinnan

HARRISBURG – Barbara Kinnan, Tioga County extension home economist, was honored with the Award of Merit by the Pennsylvania Maple Producers' Council. She received a plaque at the association's annual meeting held in conjunction with the 69th Farm Show.

Mrs. Kinnan works closely with the maple industry, both as an extension home economist and producer. She and her husband, Richard, along with their in-laws and five children, operate a 3,000 tap operation and custom boil another 1,000 tap output at their maple sugar enterprise, "Kinnan's Century Trees" located in Middlebury Center.

For the last ten years, the award winner served on the maple products committee at the Farm Show, assisting in establishing classes for producers to show new uses of their maple products and increasing the educational value of the individual collective entries.

To further support the use of Pennsylvania maple products, Mrs. Kinnan worked with the State Maple Producers' Council to establish statewide rules for the selection of the Maple Sweetheart.

Two State Maple Producers' Council tours have been held by the Potter-Tioga Maple Producers' Association and Mrs. Kinnan assisted in planning these activities. Kinnan's Century Trees is often used for tours to display new concepts in maple production. This sugar operation features a tubing sap collection system, a reverse osmosis machine, and modern gas-fired evaporators.

Mrs. Kinnan is currently helping develop the North American Maple Syrup Council's meeting and tour to be hosted by the Potter-Tioga Maple Producers' Association next fall.

ONE TOUGH MACHINE...

THE SASQUATCH 340 The Sasquatch 340 all-terrain vehicle is strong and tough and can take all other 3 wheelers on the market hands down.

Designed and built to last, the Sasquatch 340 tackles the toughest jobs thanks to its chainless drive transaxle and powerful heavy-duty Kawasaki 341cc industrial engine. This easy-to-handle 3 wheel ATV rides with fantastic responsiveness and has proven itself for over 10 years, even conquering the swamps of Louisiana where others bogged down.

Shopping for life insurance

NEWARK, Del. – Variety has suddenly become the spice of life insurance. Flexibility is the word, as companies compete for clients.

Life insurance used to come in two basic styles–term and whole. Both provide money to dependents in case the insured person dies and earned income stops. Term insurance usually provides protection only, paying the face value of the policy at death. There is no savings component to term insurance.

Whole life insurance may cover you for your entire life, providing you keep the policy in force, explains Mary Alice Morris, an extension home economist for Delaware State College. If you die, your beneficiaries get the face value of the policy. If you give up the policy, you still get the cash value--the savings you've accumulated over the years. Also, the premiums remain constant, which usually means they're higher than term insurance when you're young and lower than term premiums when you're old.

Recently introduced life insurance policies–among them universal life and adjustable life–offer more flexibility. Many combine elements of both whole life and term protection in one policy, thus eliminating the need to choose between them. Such policies can be tailored for each family's situation, Morris says, for a variety of savings and protection options over the policy's lifetime.

This means that as circumstances change, you can raise or lower your premium payments or the amount of coverage, lengthen or shorten the protection period of the premium payment period, or add to or withdraw from the policy's cash value.

But are these policies a good buy?

"You still must ask yourself the bottom-line question," Morris says. "Does this new flexibility provide more protection at a lower cost?"

It doesn't always make good economic sense to try to combine a savings plan with protection against income loss when buying life insurance, the home economist points out You may be better off to buy term life insurance for the protection it offers, and put the money saved on higher premiums into a savings account.

Money market instruments, for example, have a great deal of flexibility, and generally pay a considerably higher interest rate than the savings portion of life insurance policies. Even though some universal life policies may advertise competitive interest rates, don't take these claims at face value. There may be unadvertised costs.

"After the company deducts the agent's commission, first year set-up costs and various other charges, and excludes the first $1,000, you may have much less money earning interest," Morris says. "The actual net rate of return may be much lower than advertised."

On the other hand, if you're not sure you have the discipline to save regularly and refrain from withdrawing the money until you no longer need life insurance protection, a flexible universal life or similar policy may be worth investigating.

In short, analyze yourself and your situation before trying policies on for size. In addition to determining your ability to save on your own, ask other crucial questions, such as: Who are my dependents? How much money will they need if I die? And how long will they need it?

"Obviously," says Morris, "if you have several young children and a spouse with no income or job skills, or an elderly dependent parent, your life insurance needs will be vastly different than if you're a single, highly-paid executive with nobody depending on you but your cat."

Once you know what you need, shopping for life insurance will be a lot easier, the home economist says. You'll select a policy instead of letting yourself be sold one. It's the passive consumer who often gets the wrong fit.

The All New SUPER BOWL E-80

Built To Last

- Reinforced Precast Concrete
- No More Rust
- No More Corrosion

A full 1" of high density styrofoam insulation coated with a reflective foil gives you the most efficient use of energy needed. A high capacity ¾" valve gives quick recovery. This plastic valve resists corrosion and is very easily serviced without the use of tools. The adjustable thermostat and element are located beneath the bowl. This effectively reduces the possibility of "stray voltage." This method of "heating through the bowl" is especially well adapted to precast concrete. Concrete itself is a good conductor of heat and at the same time is a poor conductor of electricity. Our concrete bowl, because of its mass will retain heat for a longer period of time. This effectively reduces the frequency of use of the heating element and thermostat, and maintains a very uniform water temperature.

The Horse's Prayer

Dedicated to Col. Herrmann — From a Horse Lover

To Thee, my Master, I offer my prayer. Feed me, water and care for me, and when the day's work is done, provide me with shelter, a clean dry bed and a stall wide enough for me to lie down in comfort.

Always be kind to me. Talk to me. Your voice often means as much to me as the reins. Pet me sometimes, that I may serve you the more gladly and learn to love you. Do not jerk the reins, and do not whip me when going uphill. Never strike, beat or kick me when I do not understand what you want, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I fail to do your bidding, see if something is not wrong with my harness or feet.

Do not check me so that I cannot have the free use of my head. If you insist that I wear blinders, so that I cannot see behind me as it was intended I should, I pray you be careful that the blinders stand well out from my eyes.

Do not overload me, or hitch me where water will drip on me. Keep me well shod. Examine my teeth when I do not eat; I may have an ulcerated tooth, and that, you know, is very painful. Do not tie my head in an unnatural position, or take away my best defense against flies and mosquitoes by cutting off my tail.

I cannot tell you when I am thirsty, so give me clean cool water often. I cannot tell you in words when I am sick, so watch me, that by signs you may know my condition. Give me all possible shelter from the hot sun, and put a blanket on me, not when I am working but when I am standing in the cold. Never put a frosty bit in my mouth; first warm it by holding it a moment in your hands.

I try to carry you and your burdens without a murmur, and wait patiently for you long hours of the day or night. Without the power to choose my shoes or patch, I sometimes fall on the hard pavements which I have often prayed might not be of wood but of such nature as to give me a safe and sure footing. Remember that I must be ready at any moment to lose my life in your service.

And finally, O My Master, when my useful strength is gone, do not turn me out to starve or freeze, or sell me to some cruel owner, to be slowly tortured and starved to death; but do thou, My Master, take my life in the kindest way, and your God will reward you here and hereafter. You will not consider me irreverent if I ask this in the name of Him who was born in a Stable.

Amen.

Real Estate Broker

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Farming is a long term, high investment engagement and therefore needs "good" management & good advice while you are operating: But, don't forget that when the time comes to cease operations for whatever reason these factors are even more important. Why? Because for most of you this is when you make some of your biggest decisions as to how to handle the capital gains (or losses) that you have worked so hard for all your lilfe. THIS SAME PRINCIPLE HOLDS TRUE FOR A NEW BUYER!!! Therefore I offer you the following:

1. Help in understanding current tax laws - financing, etc.
2. Exposure through the use of modern technology - video tapes of farms and Multi-List services for maximum exposure with the least effort on your part.
3. A working knowledge of competitive pricing & availability of farms over a large territory. I work at it daily - my fulltime effort!
4. An all out effort at honesty & straight forwardness. (Sometimes this is very difficult in today's market place -- "But I try hard.")

In Summary: Well, I guess I am just an ex-farm boy who thru a physical problem decided to make good in another related field. Let's do it together!!

Here is a sample of farms I now have for sale:

Pa. vegetable growers plan conference

HERSHEY – Vegetable growers from all over the Commonwealth will be gathering in Hershey next week for educational seminars and an industry trade show. Eight sessions on vegetable and small fruit production are scheduled during the three-day event. More than 100 companies will be present at the trade show with the latest in equipment, supplies, pesticides, and seed varieties. The 1985 Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference opens Jan. 29, 1985 at The Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

Registration is open to all interested persons and begins at 7:30 on each morning of the Conference in the main lobby of the Convention Center at West Chocolate Avenue and University Drive in Hershey. Registration fees, which provide admission to the educational meetings and the industry trade show, are $20 for three days and $10 for one day. Lodging and meals are extra. Participation in the Conference allows Pennsylvania Certified Pesticide Applicators to update their certificates. Additional information may be obtained from the county extension office throughout the state or from William Troxell, Executive Secretary, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, R.D. 1 Box 392, Northumberland, PA 17857-9724, telephone 717-473-8468 or 717-275-4553 (daytime).

Tuesday, Jan. 29, will feature a morning session devoted to tomato production, one of the state's most important vegetable crops. Mr. James Klickman, an Ohio tomato grower, and Mr. David Seems, a Kutztown innovator in mechanical tomato harvesting, will join Penn State personnel as speakers. The top tomato growers in the state will be honored at the annual Tomato Awards Luncheon at noon. A concurrent morning session will cover general vegetable production topics. Mr. Ransom Blakely, a well-known marketing consultant, will speak on direct marketing principles. Row tunnels for early vegetable production, manure use, and cucurbit insect control will also be covered.

Tuesday afternoon will also have concurrent sessions, one on pepper production and one on general vegetable production. Dr. Dale Marshall, Michigan, will cover the various aspects of mechanical pepper harvesting. Weed and disease control in peppers as well as intensive pepper production will also be discussed. Asparagus production, new varieties, and sludge application will be reviewed in the general vegetable session.

The fruit growers of Pennsylvania, Maryland and New Jersey will join the vegetable growers on Tuesday evening for a banquet. Mr. Henry Schriver, "Ohio's Farmer Philosopher," who is nationally known for his humor, wit, and good common sense, will be the speaker.

Wednesday, Jan. 30, will feature speakers on conservation tillage methods, vegetable varieties, marketing, weed and insect management, and irrigation systems. The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association will also be held.

Small fruit production will be the theme on Thursday, Jan. 31. Strawberry culture, grape varieties, irrigation, and bramble culture and diseases will be among the topics discussed.

The Conference is annually sponsored by the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, The Pennsylvania State University college of agriculture and the Pennsylvania Food Processors Association. The State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania along with the State Horticultural Societies of Maryland and New Jersey will be holding concurrent meetings on tree fruit production at the Convention Center. The trade show is coordinated by the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania. Various social events are scheduled for the evening hours making the Conference an educational and social affair where growers can meet fellow growers from around the state and share their problems and ideas.

Hotel arrangements must be made directly with The Hershey Lodge (W. Chocolate Ave. and University Dr., Hershey, PA 17033, 717-533-3311) or at another nearby hotel. Luncheon tickets (Tuesday) are $9.50 and Banquet tickets (Tuesday) are $20 per person. Both will be available at the Conference. Walk-in registrations are welcome. Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association dues are $20 at the Conference. Members receive reduced registration fees, $15 for three days and $8 for one day.

Firms suspended from school lunch program

WASHINGTON – The U.S. Department of Agriculture has suspended two California poultry firms from participating in the federal school lunch program because of alleged false representation that their product met federal school lunch program specifications, according to Secretary of Agriculture John Block.

The suspended firms are Cal-Pacific Poultry Inc., Pomona, Calif., where the alleged violations occurred, and Beaumont Poultry, Inc., Beaumont, Calif., which is under the same management. The alleged violations relate to quality levels and not product safety.

In addition, USDA is initiating action to withdraw poultry grading services from the plants.

Cal-Pacific did not sell directly to USDA, but supplied boneless fowl to three other plants which were under contract to sell chicken patties to the school lunch program. USDA has reason to believe that poultry meat used to produce chicken patties was misrepresented as meeting school lunch program specifications, a violation of USDA regulations.

"At this time, there is no evidence of a health threat from the product, and there have been no reports of illness associated with it," Block said.

As a precautionary measure, USDA is asking states and schools to hold patties purchased from the three plants which were supplied by Cal-Pacific.

USDA is also notifying commercial users of products from Cal-Pacific and Beaumont Poultry.

"Because of ongoing problems with plant management, USDA had also increased inspection at Cal-Pacific and Beaumont through the department's Intensified Regulatory Enforcement Program to provide further assurance that only wholesome, unadulterated product enters consumer channels," Block said.

Products from the three firms was shipped to schools in the following 39 states and territories: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Guam, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Puerto Rico, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

Ross to represent USDA with UN food organizations is Rome

WASHINGTON – Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has appointed James E. Ross to represent the U.S. Department of Agriculture at the U.S. Mission in Rome. The Mission is the U.S. liaison with United Nations' food and agricultural organizations headquartered in Rome.

The organizations include the Food and Agricultural Organization, the World Food Council, World Food Program, and the International Fund for Agricultural Development.

As a member of the U.S. Mission team, Ross is responsible for agricultural input into the Mission's relations with the organizations. This includes commodity and food security activities related to FAO and WFC. Ross also provides USDA's Office of the General Sales Manager with information about WFP activities related to the U.S. P.L.-480 Food for Peace program.

Ross, a career member of the U.S. senior foreign service, previously served as assistant general sales manager and assistant administrator for export credits in USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service.

His other USDA assignments include service as agricultural counselor at the U.S. Embassies in Egypt (1978-81) and Venezuela (1976-78), and as special assistant for international affairs and commodity programs (1975-76).

Ross was a staff member at the University of Florida from 1966-75, serving on its campus in Gainesville and in Costa Rica and Ghana. University assignment was as assistant dean for agricultural extension programs.

Ross served with the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association from 1961-66 as the first coordinator of the association's international program to establish rural electrification in developing countries.

A native of Illinois, Ross received four degrees from the University of Illinois, including a Ph.D. in agricultural economics. Ross grew up on a grain and livestock farm near Danville.

New future ag trade policy papers released by gov't

WASHINGTON – Senator Jesse Helms, chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, has announced the release of a second committee print on the future direction of farm policy.

Entitled "Trade Policy Perspectives: Setting the Stage for 1985 Agricultural Legislation, the print is a compilation of papers on agricultural trade issues by leaders in the agricultural sector.

"Without a doubt, consideration of U.S. export policy will be a central part of the farm bill debate this year," said Helms. "While exports have rebounded somewhat in the past year, our farmers continue to be hurt by unfair competition, weak foreign currencies, and domestic farm programs that hamper their ability to compete. The tremendous productive capability of U.S. farmers means that we must export to prosper. Congress must write a 1985 farm bill that will enable farmers to export in a global business environment."

"I have said that farm programs must be returned to market-oriented policies. One of the keys to the success of domestic programs is a strong export policy. I hope this committee print will trigger the kind of debate the Congress needs to write a reasonable and effective export policy in the 1985 farm bill."

In April, 1984, the Agriculture Committee released the first print, entitled, "Farm Policy Perspectives: Setting the Stage for 1985 Agricultural Legislation." That print dealt with the issues relating to reform of domestic agricultural programs.

The new print contains papers from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, farmers and ranchers, economists, and agribusiness, representing a diversity of viewpoints. Topics examined in the print include the effect of domestic programs on exports, the changing conditions in the world market, and various policy options in reforming U.S. export programs.

"While there are certainly differences and disagreements among the contributors, I think it's clear that there is a consensus that the U.S. must become more competitive in the global business environment," said Senator Helms. "Our challenge this year is to write legislation that will achieve this common goal."

The print also contains a number of reference tools: A description of policy tools for international agricultural trade; a description of the European Economic Community's Common Agricultural Policy; an explanation of other types of foreign subsidized competition; and a glossary of terms common in debate over agricultural exports.

The cost of the trade print is $8.50. Copies may be ordered by writing to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. The document stock number is 052-070-05989-3.

Also, the Government Printing Office has announced a second press run of the first print on domestic agricultural programs. Copies of that print, priced at $6.50, may now be ordered. That document stock number is 052-070-05924-9.

Comments sought on USDA timber contracts

WASHINGTON – Proposed rules for implementing the timber sale contract buy-out provisions of the Federal Timber Contract Payment Modification Act and an interim policy for accommodating changes in contract extensions have been released for public comment, R. Max Peterson, chief of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Forest Service announced today.

"The 1984 Federal Timber Contract Modification Act provides purchasers of federal timber an opportunity to buy-out some of their contracts," Peterson said. "The proposed rules and interim policy announced today are the first steps in implementing the provisions of the Act."

The Act, signed last October by President Reagan, permits many companies that purchased federal timber before Jan. 1, 1982 to terminate unprofitable contracts by paying a buy-out charge. A recession in the housing industry caused the timber buyers to be overextended and government action was necessary to aid the economically hard-pressed industry.

Peterson said the proposed rules permit purchasers to buy out up to 55 percent of the total volume they hold in contracts awarded prior to Jan. 1, 1982, and still in force as of June 1, 1984. Individual purchasers may not, however, buy out more than a maximum of 200 million board feet. They buy-out cost to a purchaser under the new law is determined on the basis of the purchaser's net worth and the estimated amount that would be lost if the purchaser had to carry out all his government timber sale contracts. The buy-out cost will be at least $10 per thousand board feet, and will otherwise vary between 10 to 30 percent of the amount overbid on the contract. An overbid is the amount by which the purchaser's bid exceeded the advertised sale price.

The Act also ratified President Reagan's July 1983 decision to allow timber purchasers to extend termination dates of their contracts for five years. The interim policy describes how the buy-out law and the extensions will fit together.

Peterson said that after public comments are analyzed, final rules on the buy-outs and a final policy on the extensions will be issued. At that time, the Forest Service will begin accepting buy-out applications from timber purchasers. Based on current conditions, the agency estimates that purchasers will return about 10 billion board feet of Forest Service timber sale volume.

Details of the proposed rules and interim policy appear in the Jan. 4 Federal Register. Comments on the interim policy will be accepted until March 5. The deadline for comments on the proposed rules is February 3. All comments should be mailed to R. Max Peterson, Chief, Forest Service, USDA, P.O. Box 2417, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Questions should be directed to Dave Spores of the agency's timber management staff at the same address or by calling (202)-447-4051.

USDA to study ag's image

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Although American agriculture boasts the highest crop yields in the world and American-grown food and fiber are major export products, the public imnage of agriculture as a dynamic sector of the economy has faded.

Many promising secondary school students, who in an earlier time might have looked toward a career in agriculture, are moving into professions they judge to be more vital because of agriculture's faded image. As a result, there may not be enough experts in the food and agricultural sciences to maintain the nation's competitive lead in agriculture.

This concern will be addressed in a new study initiated by the National Council on Vocational and Technical Education in Agriculture. The study, sponsored primarily the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Education, will be conducted by the National Academy of Sciences.

Secretaries John R. Block of agricultures and Terrel H. Bell of education joined Frank Press, president of the National Academy of Sciences, on Tuesday, Dec. 18, 1984 in signing a cooperative agreement to carry out the study.

The signing took place at the National Academy of Sciences in Washington, DC. Larry Case, chairman of The Council, represented the agriculture education profession at the signing attended by nearly 100 Washington, DC based representatives of the agriculture industry.

The study will be lead by a committee of experts in agriculture and education which will review and evaluate vocational agriculture/FFA programs at the high school level and develop recommendations for strengthening them. A convocation and several regional meetings will be held during the study to focus national attention on the problem.

Secretary Bell, in his last day of

New study

official duties with the federal government, said prior to the signing of the agreement, "I've felt that one of the reasons that American agriculture is superior to anything in the world, and far ahead of whatever is in second place, is because of the vocational agriculture/FFA program and other agricultural related programs in this country.

"By having said all that, I think that it is fitting that we complete a study that takes stock, appraises where we are, and identifies gaps between what is and what ideally could be. We should then use this as a way to renew, rejuvenate and bring up to date the agricultural education programs in our secondary schools.

"We do this study knowing that we already have a very outstanding educational program. I just wish that some other aspects of American education in the secondary school area were up to par of what the vocational agriculture/FFA program is."

Secretary Block also voiced his support for the program and for the study. He said, "We have seen a lot of specialization and change in agriculture in my lifetime to date. We are going to see much, much more in the future. We need to have an agricultural industry that is supported and backed up with an educational program that can meet the needs in the future as we have been successful in meeting the needs in the past.

"I don't think we know for sure what changes are in the offering. But I know we need to be flexible and look towards change to address a new future, a future that we can only speculate about. But we need to do the best we can in charting the right kind of course.

"So, whether we add to, take away, change, move, or whatever we do, we need to do it with some degree of study and careful contemplation in hopes that we are able to forsee the needs of the future as effectively as we can."

In thanking the Secretaries and the Academy for their support of the study, Case said, "Certainly agriculture changes, and changes in society and educational environment in which the programs must operate ongoing are constantly changing.

"It is necessary that this study be conducted because it appears that there is a great deal of change even more today than there ever has been in the past. So, it is appropriate that we do this study so that we have a careful and calculated path plotted for us in the future."

Following the cooperative agreement signing, there was a reception co-sponsored by the National FFA Alumni Association, the National Vocational Agriculture Teachers' Association and The Council.

The 14-month study will cost an estimated $250,000. In addition to federal funding, support also is being solicited from the private sector.

Delaware vegetable production up

NEWARK, Del. – The production of fresh market vegetables increased dramatically in Delaware during 1984, according to figures from the Delaware Department of Agriculture and the Delaware Crop Reporting Service.

Although heavier yields accounted for a large portion of the increased output, the acreage of both fresh market and processing vegetables was larger.

The production of fresh market vegetables was up 24 percent from 1983 and the output of vegetables grown for processing jumped 28 percent.

Bill Sammons, Marketing Manager for the Delaware Department of Agriculture, says potatoes and watermelons led the way for fresh vegetable acreage.

"Potato production was at 1,238,000 hundredweight, up slightly from 1983," according to Sammons. "The yield was up 40 hundredweight and 100 more acres were harvested," he said.

"Watermelons were next in terms of pounds produced with 309,560 hundredweight. Our production of melons was up 41 percent from 1983, with 170 more acres being harvested," Sammons said.

Sweet corn production was up 22 percent and cabbage production increased 10 percent. Other fresh market crops showing an increase in production were cucumbers, asparagus and broccoli. Vegetable production is big business in Delaware according to Sammons, and getting bigger every year.

"We have some distinct advantages for growing vegetables in this region that more and more growers and buyers are discovering. Our weather is conducive for growing a variety of vegetables and fruits; we're within a couple of hours of major receiving points like Philadelphia, Baltimore, New York, Washington, and so on; and our growers have the know how to grow and pack quality items," he said.

The Delaware Department of Agriculture has recently begun a marketing and promotion program for the state's vegetable industry.

Directories of growers and shippers and point of purchase materials featuring the Delaware Agricultural Products logo are among the items being distributed free of charge by the agriculture departments marketing staff.

USDA to form potato commission

WASHINGTON – Secretary of Agriculture John Block has announced his intention to form a national advisory commission to examine and make recommendations concerning economic and trade problems facing the U.S. potato industry. The commission, he said, is to consist of representatives of USDA and the potato industry.

Details on the composition, function and duties of the commission will be developed by USDA in the coming weeks with the participation of interested industry representatives.

The commission will be formed in accordance with the regulations of the Department governing the establishment of advisory committees.

Be careful when riding all-terrain vehicles

UNIVERSITY PARK – All-terrain vehicles (ATVs) are the newest craze in recreational motorized vehicles Owners should be warned, however, that these vehicles are as dangerous as they as fun.

ATVs are small recreational motorcycles with three large, soft tires designed for rough terrain. Whether used for farm work or recreation, they are popular additions to the motorcycle family Sales of the vehicles over the last three years have soared, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC).

But ATV sales have mirrored the climbing injury and death rates of ATV riders.

"ATV accident rates will continue to rise until people become aware of the hazards and use better judgment in buying and using the vehicles, or until manufacturers voluntarily take safety measures into their own hands," Penn State farm safety specialist Dennis Murphy says.

Information from the CPSC's injury surveillance system indicates that the number of ATV-related accidents has increased from 8,600 in 1982 to 27,600 in 1983 and 54,000 in 1984. The ATV death toll since 1982 has topped 80.

Murphy believes ATVs may be more dangerous than other recreational vehicles for two reasons.

"ATVs can go places where other recreational vehicles like dirt bikes can't go – over steeper hills, heavily forested terrain, mud holes," he says. "This exposure to hazardous terrain makes them dangerous.

"And the vehicles are unstable. The three-wheeled models tip over easily on rough terrain."

Because the vehicles are powerful enough to move over rough ground, Murphy points out, ATVs work well on farms when towing equipment or checking farm operations. Farmers, however, should follow the same safety precautions as when operating tractors.

As a safety checklist, Murphy offers the following suggestions:

Wear protective gear when riding an ATV. Gloves, helmets, goggles, long pants and work boots with strong heels should be worn while riding. "The body should be completely covered," Murphy says.

Start out at slow speeds in a familiar place, and don't ride n paved roads or streets.

Don't ride double, and don't operate after using alcoholic beverages.

First-time riders should be supervised when riding. "If the rider isn't ready emotionally or physically for a motorbike or tractor, the rider isn't ready for an ATV," Murphy says.

Larger ATVs are meant for larger riders, and can travel at higher speeds. Children shouldn't ride the larger vehicles, Murphy says, and might be better off starting on four-wheeled ATVs.

THE KRAUSE LANDSMAN saves TIME saves FUEL
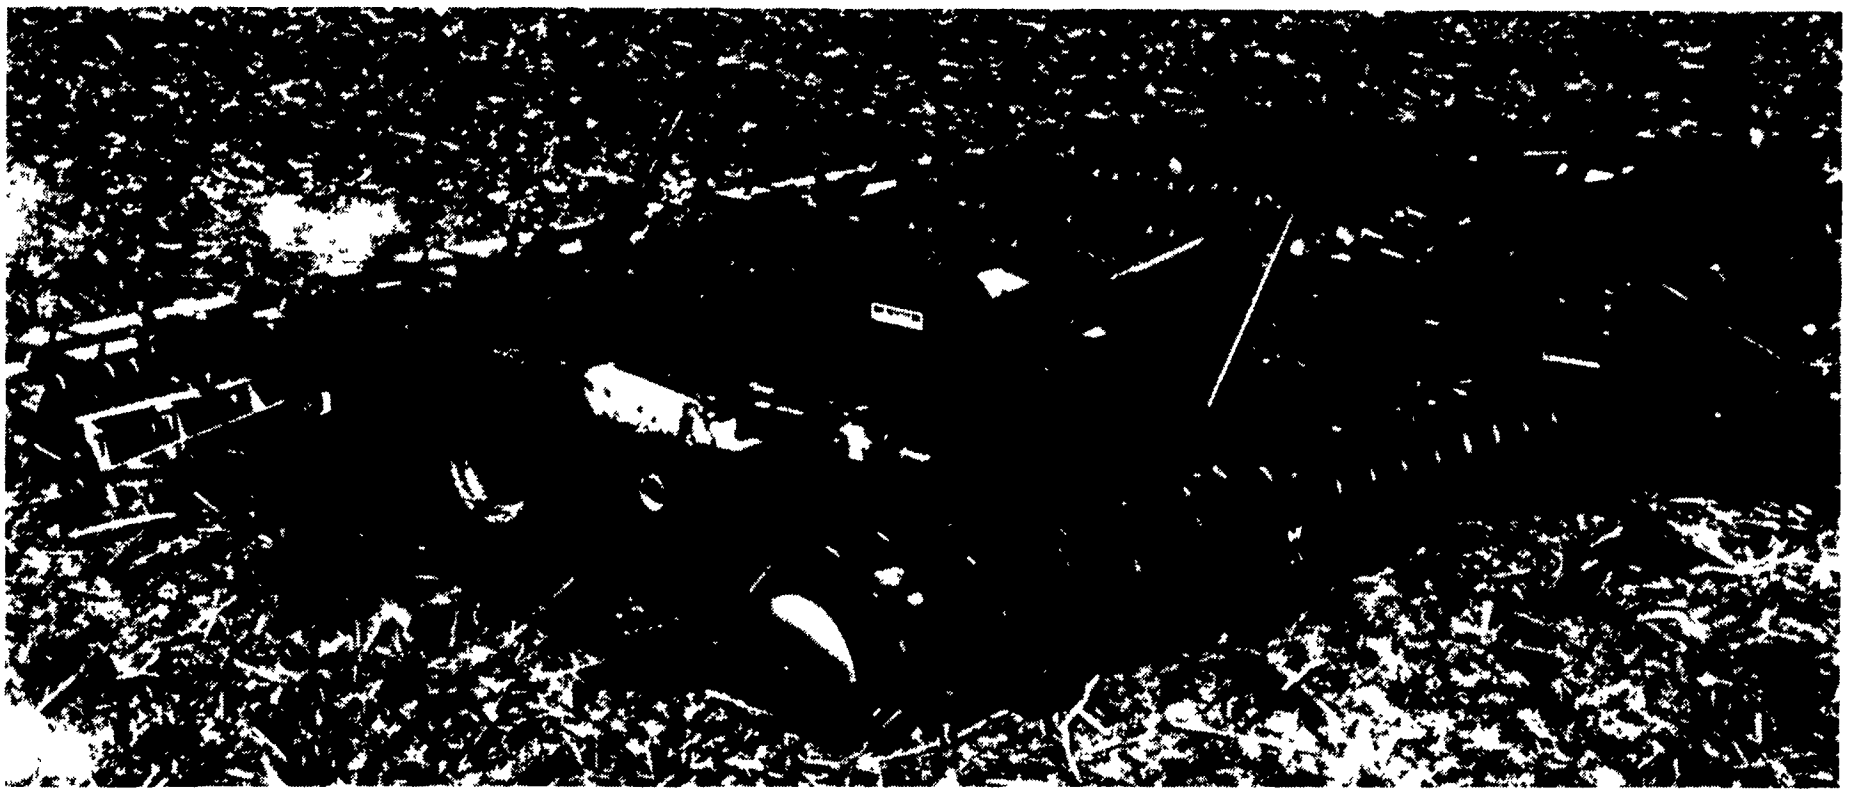
saves MONEY

LANDSMAN is the Conservation Tillage Tool from Krause



The same Krause that pioneered the ROCKFLEX bearing hanger and the FLEX-WING Disc Harrow has built the LANDSMAN Conservation Tillage Tool to do in one pass what you now do in four. With a LANDSMAN you can disc, incorporate chemicals, cultivate and finish all in one trip. This can reduce your tillage costs by 70%. Because the LANDSMAN is designed to operate effectively at 6 to 7½ miles per hour, you'll cover more acres in less time and burn considerably less fuel.

YOU CAN EXPECT SUPERIOR PERFORMANCE FROM THE LANDSMAN, BECAUSE IT'S FROM KRAUSE

See It At C.B. Hoober & Son, Inc.

ProTek™

The new technology in protein efficiency.

PAT PENDING

"I'd call this a major scientific discovery for dairy feeding."

When you can reduce protein in the milking ration by 15 to 20 percent while maintaining milk production, that's efficiency! And that's exactly what new ProTek™ feeding is all about.

This new technology of protein treatment can greatly improve protein utilization by dairy cows. And do it consistently. That's because ProTek is a unique new process rather than just another reformulation of protein sources. It's an exclusive process developed by Central Soya Research. Patent is pending.

National Western Stock Show

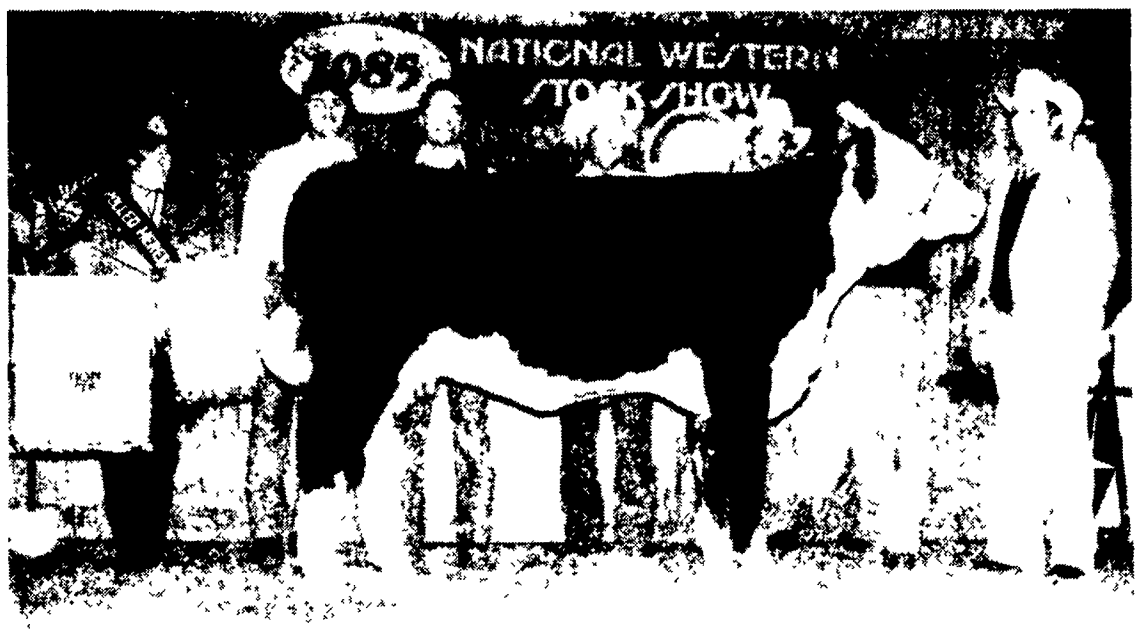
Falklands Farm has pen champions

Spring Bottom shows top Polled Hereford female

DENVER, Colo. — Polled Hereford breeders from all parts of the country, stretching from California to Connecticut, descended upon Denver for the National Western Stock Show. The Polled Hereford Standard of Perfection (SOP) Show hosted 164 entries for the Jan. 15, competition that was judged by Dick Hubman of Hub Ranches, Bonanza, Ore.

Senior champions WAT GK Discovery and SBF Royal Gypsy captured the grand champion titles in the bull and heifer shows, respectively. Discovery is a February 1982 son of Wild Cat Sundance 7K and is owned by Glenkirk Farms, Maysville, Mo.; Jac's Ranch, Bentonville, Ark.; and C.G. Watson, Wasola, Mo. This is teh second consecutive year that Discovery has won the championship honors at the National Western. In addition, he was named the champion bull recently at the Canadian Western Agribition.

SBF Royal Gypsy advanced from the top slot in the senior division to take the grand champion female title. Spring Bottom Farm, Fairfield, led out this March 1983 heifer sired by Beartooth Nomad 421N. She was previously named the reserve champion at both the 1983 and 1984 Keystone International Livestock Expositions.



SBF Royal Gypsy was named to the championship roster as senior and grand champion Polled Hereford heifer at the National Western Stock Show. She is owned by Spring Bottom Farm, Fairfield, Pa. The 164-head Standard of Perfection Show was held Jan. 15 in Denver and was judged by Dick Hubman of Hub Ranches, Bonanza, Ore.

Falklands Farm of Schellsburg, collected the champion banners in both the pen-of-three and pen-of-five competitions. Falklands' pen-of-three bulls calved between Jan. 1, 1983 and Aug. 31, 1983, posted an average weight of 1,583 lb., a 2.46 lb. weight per day of age (WDA), a .21 inch fat thickness and a 39.5 cm scrotal circumference. The sires of the pen were Enforcer 107H and PRL 930K Hotline 347N.

Falklands' champion pen-of-five bulls calved during the same time period had an average weight of 1,568 lb., a WDA of 2.43 lb., .21 inch fat thickness and a 39.5 cm scrotal circumference. They were sired by Enforcer, Hotline, Justamere Brigadier 930K and FLF Enforcer 9014.

Polled Hereford maternal merit was easily seen in the cow-calf division. KK Miss Vindy 47P paired with her June heifer calf by BT Butler 452M caught the judge's eye and moved into the champion cow-calf position. The cow is a 2-year old by KK Vind Giant 78K and the pair was exhibited by Timberline Cattle Co., Sandpoint, Idaho; Genetic Investments, Fremont, Calif.; and Beartooth Ranch. JR 445M Tina P58 and her June heifer calf wrapped up the reserve cow-calf honors. The 2-year-old dam was sired by BT CL Domino 445M and owned by John E. Rice and Sons Inc., Sheridan, Wyo., while the calf by JR 930K Landmark P200 is owned by Beartooth.

Huntingdon Farm, Genetics Unlimited win in Denver

DENVER, Colo. — Competition was stiff at the 1985 National Angus Show held during the National Western Stock Show in Denver. Judge Mark Richardson, Afton, Oklahoma, awarded the coveted championship titles to the 196 bulls and heifers that were exhibited.

The national grand champion bull trophy went to HAR Bang 1774, the junior winner. This January 1983 QLC Winchester son is owned by Harmon Angus Ranch, Lavina, Montana. For reserve grand champion bull honors, Richardson chose his senior titlist, Greenbrae Chairman. Owned by Chairman's Board of Directors, Cloverdale, Indiana, he is a May 1982 son of Fairfield Hi Guy.

In the 103-head female show, the national grand champions came from the intermediate division. Intermediate champion, Windac Tiara F460 claimed the purple rosette for her owners Windy Acres Angus and Bert Skou, Harrison, Nebraska, and B&L Properties, Shawnee Oklahoma. New drug for hogs

Put a bunch of unfamiliar pigs together and they'll soon be into a fight. It's just a fact of life that pigs have a dominance or "pecking" order and the way it's defended is through fighting. The problem is, these fights can get expensive. Pigs go off feed. They get injured. Some even die.

And until recently we haven't been able to do much about it. Some producers provide each pig with the same smell–by using anything from after-shave to crankcase oil. Others offer an elaborate assortment of items to distract the pigs–chains, tires, bowling balls and the like.

But now the FDA has given its approval to a new drug which helps control aggressiveness when mixing pigs that weigh up to 80 pounds. It's called azaperone and it's marketed by the Pitman-Moore Company as Stresnil Injection.

In a recent issue of Animal Nutrition and Health, D.B. Porter and C.A. Slusser presented some data regarding the use of Stresnil in pigs.

• EFFECTIVENESS--The effects of the drug become apparent within four or five minutes. Blood pressure and heart rate drop. Respiratory rate may increase. Body temperature doesn't change. Pigs will be sedated, but conscious, from 30 minutes to two hours.

Pitman-Moore conducted field trials with more than 1,500 pigs to test the drug's value under commercial farm conditions. Fighting was reduced by 64 percent. One trial in Indiana used 163 40-pound pigs. In the control group, there was an average of 500 fights in the first two hours after intermingling pigs. In the drug injected group there were 50. So it seems to help.

But will it save you money? In a series of trials in Nebraska, Pennsylvania and Illinois, pigs were injected as they were moved from farrowing crates into nursery pens and from nurseries into finishing pens. Veterinarians made the injections (1 cc per 40 pounds of body weight) just prior to the re-grouping. Control pigs received no medication.

Weight gains and feed intake were recorded for the next week and a half. Weight gains were significantly greater in the azaperone-treated groups in three out of six trials. Feed conversion in the treated groups was at least as good as that of the control group in all trials.

• SAFETY--Occasional side effects include huddling and piling, shivering, increased respiratory rate and salivation. The drug is rapidly absorbed from the injection site and is degraded in the liver. Tissue levels are below 10 parts per billion 12 hours after injection.

• DOSAGE–Optimal dose is 1 cc (1 mg) per 40 pounds of body weight. It costs about .25 cents per cc. So treating a 20-pound weanling pig will cost you about 12 ½ cents.

• EXTRA-LABEL USE–In a survey of Midwest veterinarians, the editor of Animal Nutrition and Health found that many practitioners inject the drug for uses other than those stated on the bottle.

• AGGRESSIVE BEHAVIOR IN LARGER PIGS–Producers often have a problem when they send only part of a pen of hogs to market. They're either left with a half-empty pen or they have to regroup and put up with the fighting. One cc per 80 to 100 pounds will help control this.

• NERVOUS OR VICIOUS SOWS AT FARROWING--Half the recommended dose has shown good results with a calming effect.

• MIXING HERD BOARS–One-quarter to one-half normal dose can eliminate fighting among intermingled boars. Some veterinarians indicate there's a danger that a small percentage of boars may exhibit permanent relaxation of the penis after the drug is used for this purpose.

• GENERAL AND LOCAL ANESTHESIA--Azoperone has been used with local anesthetics in performing caesarean sections. It's also been used alone in repairing rectal prolapses and scrotal hernias.

So there's some merit to this new drug. It's safe. It seems to work. And it's not too expensive.

Is it something you should be using? If you consider fighting a problem in your operation, you might want to give it a try. If the fighting doesn't bother you, then save your money.

Farm Bill focus of fertilizer industry meeting

WASHINGTON – The nation's fertilizer industry association members meet February 3-5 in Atlanta to participate in wide-ranging discussions on 1985 farm legislation, industry trends, market outlook, farmer attitudes, and the national economy.

The Fertilizer Institute Annual Meeting, under the theme "Impact '85," will feature Rep. Tom Foley (D-Wash,), House majority whip, and vice-chairman, House Agriculture Committee, with an outlook on the 1985 Farm Bill. Political columnists James J. Kilpatrick and Carl T. Rowan, regular panelists on "Agronsky and Company," popular TV talk show, will debate national policy and economic issues and respond to questions from industry executives.

The presidents of two major agricultural grower groups–Varel Bailey, Anita, Iowa, National Corn Growers Association, and Henry Nesham, Berthold, N.D., National Association of Wheat Growers–will respond to the U.S. Department of Agriculture outlook as presented by Terry Barr, USDA director of economic analysis. Charles C. Muscoplat, president, Molecular Genetics, Inc., will discuss the growing development of biotechnology and the impact that this research may hold for fertilizer marketing.

Two concurrent sessions during the two-day meeting will focus on the effect of industry trends on business, and on fertilizer market outlook for 1985. The session on trends will be moderated by R. Keith Gaumer, manager, fertilizer sales, Laverty Elevator, Indianola, Iowa. Panelists will be Robert Anderson, president, Nebraska Fertilizer & Agricultural Chemical Institute, Lincoln; Ted Evans, director, transportation USS Agri-Chemicals, Atlanta; Merrill Frick, president, Frick Services, Inc., Wawaka, Ind.; and Tyrone Thayer, vice president, industrial group, Cargill, Inc.

The session of the fertilizer market outlook will be moderated by Gene Graves, vice president, planning and economics, Agrico Chemical Co., Tulsa, Okla. Panelists will include Terry Barr, USDA; Glen Brandt, chairman, Brandt Chemicals Co., Pleasant Plains, Ill.; and Deneb Teleki, director, corporate marketing research, International Minerals & Chemical Corp., Northbrook, Ill.

The Institute's member report will be given by L.L. Jaquier, TFI board chairman, and executive vice president, agricultural chemicals group, W.R. Grace & Co., Memphis, Tenn., and TFI President Gary D. Myers. The two TFI officers will share presiding officer duties during the general sessions, along with Tom Wright, Institute board vice chairman, and president, Texas Farm Products Co., Nacogdoches, Texas.

Automatic tilt head for combines increases efficiency

MENDOTA, Ill. – The Field Tracker Tilt Head attachment from Hart-Carter mounts between a combine's feeder house and header. The unit incorporates electronic sensors at each end of the header to activate electro-hydraulic controls that instantly, automatically adjust the cutter bar and pick up reel to match ground slope within a range of 6°F. This holds the cutter bar close to and parallel with the terrain under all field conditions. A manual in-cab control is also available.

The obvious benefit of a combine equiped with a field tracker is its ability to pick up a greater percentage of the crop, even down to the bottom beans. But the improved efficiency gained also permits the use of a wider header that improves the combine's capacity while reducing stress on both the machine and operator.

The Field Tracker Tilt Head package is available for 80% of all combines currently on the market. The firm is also adapting the unit for use with corn heads.

For further information, call 815/539-9371 or write to Hart-Carter Company, 1501 1st Avenue, Mendota, IL 61342.

Kubota adds three new L-series tractors

COMPTON, Calif. – Kubota Tractor Corp. has introduced three new tractors to its L-Series line–the 21 PTO horsepower L2250, the 23.5 PTO horsepower L2550 and the 27 PTO horsepower L2850–each featuring a direct-injection engine. These new Kubota tractors use the same direct injection diesel engine design that the company introduced earlier this year in its 36 PTO horsepower L3750 and 40 PTO horsepower L4150 models.

According to Kubota, direct injection provides better fuel efficiency and higher torque rise than indirect injection engines.

The three new L-Series tractors feature superior cold weather starting capability, an advanced mechanical shuttle transmission and easy maintenance access. And, they are versatile, with each of the three new tractors having two-speed rear-PTO and mid-PTO.

Noise level is kept low and safety is enhanced due to the full enclosure of the engine on these three new models. However, both the left and right panels covering the engine can be easily removed for servicing and maintenance.

The advanced mechanical shuttle transmission found on the new L2250, L2550 and L2850 eliminates the antiquated "H" pattern, which caused an operator to struggle to find the reverse gear. These Kubota tractors have eight forward and seven reverse speeds. This range of forward and reverse speeds allows the operator to perform a wide variety of chores, including park and grounds maintenance, landscaping, light construction, nursery work, farm chores and earth moving.

Kubota Tractor Corp. has introduced this 27 PTO horsepower L2850 tractor; it is equipped with a direct injection diesel engine, as are the new 21 PTO horsepower L2250 and 23.5 PTO horsepower L2550.

All three new L-Series tractors have compatible, Kubota-made implements: a mid-mount mower, a quick-attach front loader and a rotary tiller, which features a unique reverse cut capability. As with all Kubota tractors, these new L-Series tractors will accommodate attachments made by other manufacturers.

The three new L-Series tractors are available through the nearly 1000 Kubota dealers across the United States. Kubota Tractor Corp. markets a complete line of tractors from 10 to 85 PTO horsepower, along with a variety of farm and lawn and garden implements. For more information about these tractors, or other Kubota products, please contact the Kubota Tractor Corp., 550 West Artesia Blvd., Compton, Calif. 90220.

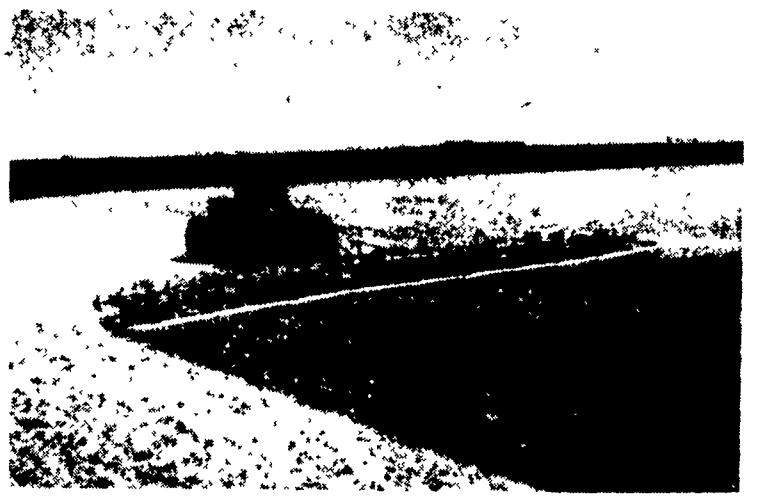
Barkman, Krause advertising and sales promotion manager. Designed to operate efficiently at field speeds of six to seven mph, the units can cover up to 35 acres per hour.

The heavy-duty field cultivator has five sections which let it fold to a roading width of only 17'4". The wings feature a unique double-fold which reduces roading height to 13'6" or 15'10".

The five-section flexibility ensures uniform working depths over uneven terrain. Optional harrow attachments–two- or three-row tines–let farmers complete two operations in a single pass, and are ideal for finished seedbed preparation and shallow chemical incorporation.

The field cultivators are built on a super-strength 3"x4" frame, and feature a rugged 4"x6" A-frame hitch. Extra-heavty six-inch pipe is used for the center rocker shaft, and walking beam tandem wheels are standard on all sections. These allow wheels to flex individually over obstacles and follow the contour of the land



Krause's 4200 Series 5-section field cultivators are the widest ever offered and can cover up to 35 acres per hour.

Spring-cushioned C-shaped shanks on uniform seven inch spacing are designed for aggressive tillage action and good penetration. Each shank has 21 inches of clearance and approximately eight inches of trip height.

Also available are heavy-duty "K"-Tine S-shaped shanks that are shot peened to relieve internal stress and provide years of flexing. They provide more action than standard shanks for greater soil mixing. A high point load keeps the sweeps level as they move through the soil, unlike conventional Danish tines that drag back increasing draft loads.

An optional trail hitch allows easy hook-up to trailing equipment. The swing tongue telescopes, slides back and forth for positioning, and automatically locks in place when backing up. A three-row tine harrow is also available as an option.

Butler Weighmaster platform scale reliable, accurate

FORT ATKINSON, Wis. – Butler Livestock Systems offers the exclusive weighmaster platform scale. Equipped with easy-to-read and accurate electronic weight indicators, the scale enables farmers and feedlot managers to accurately weigh up to 40,000 pounds in portable and permanent applications.

The Weighmaster system is the ideal scale for weighing trucks, wagons, livestock and grinder mixers. You can also check crop yields, verify commodity purchases or check axle weights. Butler's exclusive electronic scale systems assures accurate measurement.

Butler's unique OMP-10 indicator is standard equipment on all Weighmaster electronic platform scale systems. The OMP-10 indicator measures up to 40,000 pounds in 10-pound increments, or it can be set for other ranges and counts. It also features an alarm that allows operators to preset weights. When a predetermined weight is reached, a visual and audible alarm is activated.

As an option, you can outfit the Weighmaster scale with an OMP-20 indicator that includes all the features of the OMP-10, plus an additional display for preset amounts. The OM-20R remote display is another option that provides operators with an instant reading in large, one-inch numerals. A radio remote transmitter, called the OMP-TR, resets the scale display to zero and is also available with the OMP-20 option.

The OMP-10 and OMP-20 microprocessors are housed in a high-impact, weather-resistant case that keeps out damaging moisture and dust with a sealed membrane front panel. They also feature low-voltage warning devices and self diagnostics. Both indicators have LCD displays with a built-in heater for reliable operation in severe cold weather.

The Weighmaster platform scale has a 7 ft. x 9 ft. weighing surface. The Weighmaster's 1,500 pounds of structural steel assures rugged performance. It also include shock-resistant strain gauge load cells for trouble-free, long-lasting performance.

Other optional equipment available for the Weighmaster system includes detachable ramps, three-point hitch attachments for portable applications, AC/DC power converters for stationary operation, and an indictor stand for easy reading.

For more information on the Weighmaster system, contact your local Butler dealer or write to Butler Livestock Systems, Scale Group, 801 Janesville Avenue, Fort Atkinson, WI 53538. Telephone: (414) 563-5521.

Kuhn introduces FC 200 mower-conditioner

ALBANY, N.Y. – Drying time of hay and grass silage may be reduced by up to 50 percent with the new FC 200 mower-conditioner, according to Kuhn Farm Machinery, Inc.

This newest mower-conditioner in the Kuhn line has more than 6½ ft. working width and requires only 55 H.P. at the tractor PTO.

Adjustable to the density of either grass or legumes, the conditioner strips the natural wax from the crop so the moisture can evaporate – but leaves the essential nutrients in the crop. It is this action that can reduce the drying time up to 50 percent, cut down the threat of weater damage, and maintian the crop's high palatability.

The no-plug cutterbar ensures cutting more hours per day, more acres per hour.

The FC 200 has a series of four oval cutting discs attached to a cutterbar that is height-adjustable to suit terrain. Blade protection features are incorporated, and removable disc bearing units reduce costly failure down-time. An adjustable swath board provides light fluffy windrows to further speed drying time.

The FC 300 mower-conditioner can be used in various combinations of mowing, conditioning, fluffing, and windrowing.

Kuhn features major warehousing for parts and service in all parts of the country and also provides airlift facilities for fast parts service where required.

Further information on the FC 200 or other mower-conditioner models with cutting widths from 5 ft., 3-inches to 10 ft. may be obtained by contacting Kuhn Farm Machinery, Inc., P.O. Box 224-P, Vernon, N.Y. 13476.

Newest model in the Kuhn line of mower-conditioners, the FC 200 has more than 6½ ft. working width and requires only 55 H.P. at the PTO.

Dixon introduces new cutter

COFFEYVILLE, Kan. – Dixon Industries, Inc. has introduced a new belt-driven 42" grass catcher that needs no auxiliary engine. The catcher fits the company's larger 42" Zero Turning Radius mowers.

"Our grass catcher is perfect for those who might have sacrificed wide cut and maneuverability for a clean cut," President K.O. Dixon said. "We try to continually improve DIXON· ZTR· mowers and introduce products that help our customers mow grass and our Dealers sell mowers. Our new 42-inch grass catcher is engineered to be compact, with a low profile that does not hamper the mower's Zero Turning Radius. In addition, there's no extra engine or bulky trail-behind bag to worry about. You might say the 'mowbility' stays, grass clippings don't!"

Powered by a single belt from the mowing deck, a lightweight impeller actually pumps grass into a redesigned bagging system. Improvements include a simple level-activated hood opener that doubles to keep the lid up and out of the way. Twin bags make dumping and handling of grass easier, Dixon explained.

USDA improves outlook and situation reports

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture will alter its outlook and situation reports series by curtailing the frequency of some issues, introducing commodity yearbooks and expanding coverage in its Agricultural Outlook magazine.

These changes will improve crop and livestock reporting by USDA's Economic Research Service, agency administrator John Lee said today.

"Overall, the adjustments will make the analysis and data program more effective for those who rely on the information," Lee said.

Agricultural Outlook, issued 11 times each year, will focus on short-term analysis of emerging conditions affecting commodities, including weather, exports, government programs, prices and production costs. Its release will be tied closely to estimates issued by USDA's Crop Reporting Board and World Agricultural Outlook Board, Lee said.

The traditional Economic Research Service quarterly outlook and situation reports will be changed to twice annually and supported by yearbooks. This series covers cotton and wool, dairy, feed, fruit, oil crops, sugar and sweeteners, tobacco, vegetables, wheat and inputs.

The series on livestock and poultry will be reduced from six to four times per year; the annual statistical bulletin on this topic will be continued.

These revamped reports will focus more on policy forces, economic situations and other conditions affecting the long-term domestic and foreign commodity picture, Lee said.

The yearbooks will present substantial historical and current data series on all aspects of the commodities, he said.

The agency plans no changes for those other outlook and situation reports dealing with exports, rice, world agriculture and world regional developments, Lee said.

Economic Research Service publications are available for sale through the Government Printing Office. For information, call (202) 447-8590. Subscriptions for each commodity series will include the two regular Outlook and Situation reports and the yearbook.

Current subscriptions will be honored in full.

Apply now for wool, lamb payments

LEBANON — The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office administers the payment program for shorn wool and unshorn lambs.

Since wool is an essential commodity which is not produced in sufficient quantity in the United States, the Secretary is directed to establish an incentive price for shorn wool in order to encourage production. The payments for unshorn lambs sold will give the same returns that would be received if the animal had been shorn to obtain a shorn wool payment.

Payments are made after the marketing year is over and the average price received by all producers is known.,

Producers who wish to apply for incentive payments on wool and unshorn lambs should report their sales to the Lebanon County ASCS Office, Agway Building by Jan. 31, 1985. Office hours are 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Phone 273-9321.

40 years of proof

Since 1940, Gehl has been building field choppers and forage harvesters with one thought in mind ...performance. And, year after year, thousands of satisfied owners prove that we know how to use that specialized experience to build better machines. Today, Gehl concentrates those 40 years of chopping know-how into three fuel-efficient, high-capacity forage harvesters:

Capacity King 1250. The largest capacity pull-type harvester on the market. Gehl's exclusive 24" spinner delivery system keeps forage moving with no cross augers to plug. The giant, 9-knife, 25½" cylinder gives a quality cut. And the new cutterbar adjustment is the easiest anywhere. In-head hydraulic knife sharpener and electric controls are standard too.

New mid-range 1000 gives you the high capacity you'd expect from the big 21" cylinder and fast spinner delivery system. Like the 1250, standard features include the in-head hydraulic knife sharpener, adjustable axles, one-way shear bolt protection and attachment down-stop.

Fuel saver 750 tackles just about any chopping job. Uses less horsepower per ton chopped than many bigger harvesters. Uses less fuel. The 8-knife cutterhead is set into the blower compartment for smooth, continuous material flow. Add Gehl's patented in-head hydraulic knife sharpener for even more cutting efficiency.

Prove to yourself that there's no substitute for Gehl's 40 years of forage harvester experience. See your Gehl dealer soon.

Morris highlights Pa. House Ag Committee concerns

HARRISBURG – The 69th Annual Pennsylvania Farm Show was the focal point of activity for the House Agriculture Committee last week, according to state Rep. Samuel W. Morris, D-Pottstown, committee chairman.

At a luncheon meeting on Wednesday, Morris was honored for his contributions to Pennsylvania agriculture by the Future Farmers of America's Keystone chapter.

Morris also conducted a briefing for Agriculture Committee members on priority agriculture issues for the current legislative session during their Farm Show visit Monday and Tuesday. "Probably one of the most urgent topics in which the committee should participate is national farm legislation," Morris told the group. "Too often in recent years, the somewhat unique problems of agriculture here in the Northeast have not been fairly represented in Congress." He noted that no members of the Pennsylvania Congressional delegation sit on the U.S. House and Senate Agriculture Committees.

"Livestock research and indemnity funding has been and continues to be a serious problem for agriculture here in Pennsylvania, since it depends primarily on the annual budget process," he noted. "Many research projects continue for several years and can be jeopardized if sufficient funds are not available in any one year.

"I think we need to take a hard look at the needs of the industry and try to arrive at some alternative method of providing for these needs."

Morris also said agricultural land preservation is another important issue for the legislature. "Some neighboring states are in the process of implementing other approaches to land preservation such as the purchase of development rights. Maybe the time has come for Pennsylvania to take a serious look at a similar project."

Property tax reform and pollution of the Chesapeake Bay by Pennsylvania farmland chemicals were other matters mentioned by the lawmaker as legislative priorities.

Keep Those Calves Doing Well

I'm not sure who suffers most from these cold winter days–calves, or the person who cares for them.

Calves need to maintain adequate body temperatures; otherwise, they'll freeze to death. They also need to breathe fresh air; moist air laden with ammonia and germs from older animals can be a killer.

So, whether we keep calves in cold housing, or in warm housing we need to observe a few precautions. Let's look at cold housing first.

No one will dispute the fact that calf hutches are cold housing. Hutches should be designed to protect calves from the elements and from cold drafts. They should be oriented to the southeast for maximum sun penetration. Be sure the hutch site is well drained; terraces and gravel beds can be a help. And, be sure the bedded pack is clean, dry and well-bedded.

A calf is born with an excellent coat–its own hair coat. It is as good an insulator as those wool jackets we enjoy on cold days if we help that calf keep its hair coat clean and dry, and if we protect it from the wind.

You can appreciate this fact if you'll just recall how that comfortable wool jacket you wear suddenly loses its warmth when you expose it to wind and rain. Our wool jackets do a good job when they are clean and dry and protected from the wind; let's provide our calves that same luxury so they can benefit from the warmth of their hair coat.

Another way calves can lose vital body heat is by being exposed to cold surfaces. The cold surface literally pulls heat from the calf's body–just as a cold concrete floor pulls heat from your feet. We can minimize this heat loss by helping calves on a deep, dry, clean bedded pack to insulate them from cold surfaces. That requires lots of bedding–more than what I observe in many hutches. True, bedding costs money, but a poor doing calf is more expensive. A well-drained exercise lot, perhaps with an elevated or graval base may help keep the bedding cleaner and drier.

Heat that is lost from the body must be replaced. That means we need to feed calves more energy on cold days–more milk or milk replacer, milk replacers of higher fat content, or more grain and hay. And, also be sure they get adequate water. Remember, calves can't drink ice.

Warm Housing

Once calves have been started in cold housing continue to raise them in cold housing. Subjecting them to warm housing, after they've developed a heavy hair coat, could result in sweating and pneumonia.

Calves can be raised in warm housing. If started in warm housing, you may want to keep them in warm housing for the remainder of the winter.

One of the main challenges in warm, confinement housing is to provide calves with good quality air–air that is dry and free of germs and ammonia. We also want to prevent their exposure to cold drafts. This requires a good ventilation system.

Where you place the calves in a barn is also important. For example, stable air should not be exhausted through the calf area for two reasons. 1) You're pulling germ laden air from older cows over the calves. 2) The calf end of the barn is generally the coldest end – and there is nothing wrong with it being cold. The problem comes when we try to warm it up with the cow air. Besides being germ-laden, the cow air is also warm and moist. When this warm, moist air hits the cooler calf area, it condenses. This increases the humidity in the calf area and can lead to pneumonia problems in calves.

Whenever possible, bring fresh air in over the calves, without creating a draft, and exhaust it over the cows. If possible, try to house the calves in a section away from older animals to protect them from germ-laden air.

Where Johnes is a problem, isolating calves from older animals, from birth to a year of age, and preventing them from contacting fecal material of older animals, can help break the disease cycle.

After Hutches, Then What?

Many dairymen experience set-backs when they take calves out of the hutches. We can minimize or prevent these set-backs if we take a few precautions.

Weaning time is a stressful time in the life of a calf. Therefore, we should make sure the calf is eating at least a pound of grain daily before being weaned. Then, let the calf acclimate itself to dry feed a couple of weeks before moving it to its first group pen.

That first group experience is also very important. That first group should be small – 3 to 5 in number. The calves should also be of similar age and size, and weaned at about the same time. Avoid putting a "new" calf into a pen of "experienced" calves; the "new" calf wouldn't have a fighting chance at the feed bunk, and would probably go off feed.

Ideally, this first group should start off by keeping the calves on the same feed. Once they've become accustomed to the group experience, the ration can then be changed, if necessary, with minimal effect on the calves.

This first group pen should also be away from older animals. Once calves have been properly immunized they can mingle with older animals. Your veterinarian can advise you about immunization procedures recommended for your farm.

Remember too, calves have a very low resistance to internal parasites. So, continue to practice good sanitation and deworm the calves about every three months.

Our aim should be to minimize the stresses on a calf through these crucial stages in its life. The above ideas should help you accomplish this.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett

1984 Taxes-
Be Careful

Some of you are going to be shocked when you either do or see your 1984 tax return. Shockers will include social security, income averaging changes, alternative minimum tax changes, depreciation recapture, and the extra number of forms to file.

Self Employment
Social Security

This will be one that should get the attention of all self employed people. It has gone up over 20 percent. An example: Last year the self employment tax on $10,000 was $935. This year it will be $1130. In most cases where your income is over $10,000, the extra social security tax will more than offset the reduction in your income tax.

Taxable Social Security

This is a repeat of an earlier column but some of you may have missed it. If you or a relative receives social security, part of it may be taxable for 1984. A single person with a total income over $25,000 or a married couple filing jointly with a total income over $32,000 may have to pay income tax on part of the social security. This fact should become part of future tax planning. By the way total income includes half of the social security you receive plus tax free interest.

Income Averaging

A pretty good tax saver in the past has turned into a lesser tax saver and for fewer people. Actually coupled with the alternative minimum tax most farmers will no longer receive much if any benefits from income averaging.

Alternative Minimum
Tax

There have been no changes since 1983 but not everyone bumps into this tax every year. Those new rules say that anyone who has a total income (including the 60 percent protected portion of long term capital gains) over a certain level (30,000 for single and 40,000 for married filing jointly) must pay at least 20 percent of that amount regardless of deductions, tax credits, income averaging, or dependents. This can catch people who have had a large capital sale or a good business year plus a large purchase of investment credit property. Add up gross income on the 1040 plus the 60 percent protected capital gains. If you have total income in excess of the above figures, check out the possibility of the alternative minimum tax.

Forms

Don't forget the 1099s discussed in this column last week. They must be filed or you are subject to a $50 fine for each missing 1099.

Many of the forms have been changed so be careful when filling then out. Watch the depreciation form 4562. Also watch the 3468 because it has two sections depending on whether you elect full credit and reduced depreciation or visa versa.

Depreciation
Recapture

This will prove to be a possible problem to people interested in using an installment sale as a way to sell certain property. Under the old law if you sold depreciable property at a profit, you could sell it on an installment sale contract. You paid taxes on the money as you received it. Under the law you can still sell it on an installment sale but you will have to pay the tax on the entire gain that is subject to depreciation recapture in the year of the sale. This does not yet include trades.

Example: You bought a tractor in 1975 for $10,000. You depreciated it to zero. In 1984, you sold it for $5,000 on sales contract that specified $1,000 plus interest be paid each year for five years. The $5,000 is a taxable gain as recaptured depreciation which means it is fully taxable. Under the old law you would pay tax on it each year as you received the $1,000 payment. Under the new law you pay on the full $5,000 even if you collect nothing in the year of sale. Implications - it may jump your tax bracket, cause you to be subject to the alternative minimum tax, pay more tax than money you collected, or result in you inadvertently reporting the sale wrong.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Here's A Timely Tip...

Apply lime often for best results

To keep your soil neutral, liming every 2 or 3 years is recommended, because of the new higher analysis fertilizers being used today

Farm Talk

by

Jerry Webb

It may come as a surprise to some of the proponents of agriculture, but there isn't one county on the Delmarva peninsula that depends on farming, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture report. In fact, there are only 700 or so in the whole United States that depend on farming, according to the USDA definition. That's in sharp contract to 1950 when there were 2,000 such counties.

While it's easy to quarrel with the department's definition of dependence on farming, it's a mistake to overlook the reality of declining political power within these counties.

Let's look at how the Department of Agriculture defines farming counties, and perhaps then we can better understand this whole business of dependence. USDA considers a county to be farming if that enterprise is a leading source of income. To be that, it must account for 20 percent or more of farm proprietors' income and labor income for that county.

When this rule is applied to all counties in the U.S. five groups emerge. These are: consistently farming counties, farm loss counties, formerly farming counties, nonfarm counties, and a nonexclusive category called overshadowed counties, where a large farm sector is eclipsed by even larger non farm economic activities.

There are no counties on the Delmarva peninsual classified as consistently' farming counties where at least 20 percent of labor and proprietors' income is derived from farming. There are, however, two overshadowed counties – Kent and Sussex in Delaware – that are in the top 20 percent of U.S. farming counties, but farm income is still overshadowed by income from other sources. The rest fall into a category labeled "other counties."

Looking at the farm dependence issue on a regional basis, it's easy to demonstrate that the northeast is losing its agricultural dependence, and along with it, its agricultural political power. In 1950 there were 33 counties in New England and the Mid-Atlantic states that received at least 20 percent of proprietors' and labor income from farming. Now there is only one. That's not to say that farming is unimportant in all but one county int he northeast, it just says that farming is not as important as a source of income as some other things. And you must remember we're looking at county income and county averages. If more than 20 percent of the county income was farm related, then that's considered a consistently farming county. If the figure is less than that, then it's classified as something else.

The Department of Agriculture analysts say a large share of the dependence on farming vanished in the 1950s. A map of the United States showing those counties that depended on farming in 1950 is almost solid black. Throughout the midwest and west there were farm counties with scattered exceptions, primarily in the northeast, north central, and the desert areas of the southwest. But today that map is almost white, signaling the absence of farming counties.

Analysts say the half-million farms in consistently farming counties average 585 acres, compared to the 440 acre U.S. average. They contain 23 percent of the nation's farms, have 31 percent of U.S. farmland, and 33 percent of all farms with more than $40,000 in sales.

About 30 percent of the jobs in consistently farming counties were on farms in the mid-seventies, but farming provided less than four percent of total employment in the remaining counties. And not surprisingly government, including state, federal and local, and service firms were the largest employers of wage and salary workers in all county groups.

Here are some final statistics from that survey: Counties with a continuing dependence on agriculture tend to be sparsely settled, containing only four percent of the nation's population. Population in the consistently farming counties averaged 11,800, and only 8,700 in the farm loss group, compared to 27,200 in the formerly farming group, and over 150,000 in the nonfarm group. Population growth was also slowest in consistently farming and farm loss counties.

What does all this mean? Well, from a political power point of view it's pretty obvious that the number of congressional districts where farming is a major source of income are few and far between.

The government survey doesn't say that the Delmarva peninsula is not an important farming area. It just says that farming is not as important in this area. It just says that farming is not as important in this area as some other things in terms of proprietor and labor income in the counties involved. And the trend is headed in an irreversible direction There's not one region in the whole country that doesn't show fewer counties dependent on farming now than there were in the 1950s.

DASHING THROUGH THE SNOW.

The storm will pass. And thankfully, so will you with a Kubota snowblower.

We have snowblowers that attach to most Kubota diesel tractors, and they are a cinch to operate. They clear snow from driveways, roads or parking lots. Break up and clear heavy drifts. And the large diameter chutes give you excellent control of casting distance.

So next time the forecast calls for snow, relax. It'll blow over. With a little help from Kubota.

BEST IN DESIGN, PRICE AND EXPERIENCE

Dairy feeding programs can come down to this.

You feed cows cash, and get cash in return. The secret is in putting the right amount in to get the most out.

That's what a Beacon Feeding Program comes down to: a profitable balance.

We survey your operation. Test your forage. Determine exact needs, surpluses and shortages. And tailor a complete program to your feeding facilities: stanchion, parlor, bunk, or electronic devices.

Your Beacon Advisor determines the exact nutritional program your herd needs for maximum milk production. Spells out costs, savings, and profit potential. And continues to monitor the whole program for you.

The next time you're shoveling out cash, think about it. And call us for details: Beacon, Cayuga, NY 13034—phone (315) 253-7331

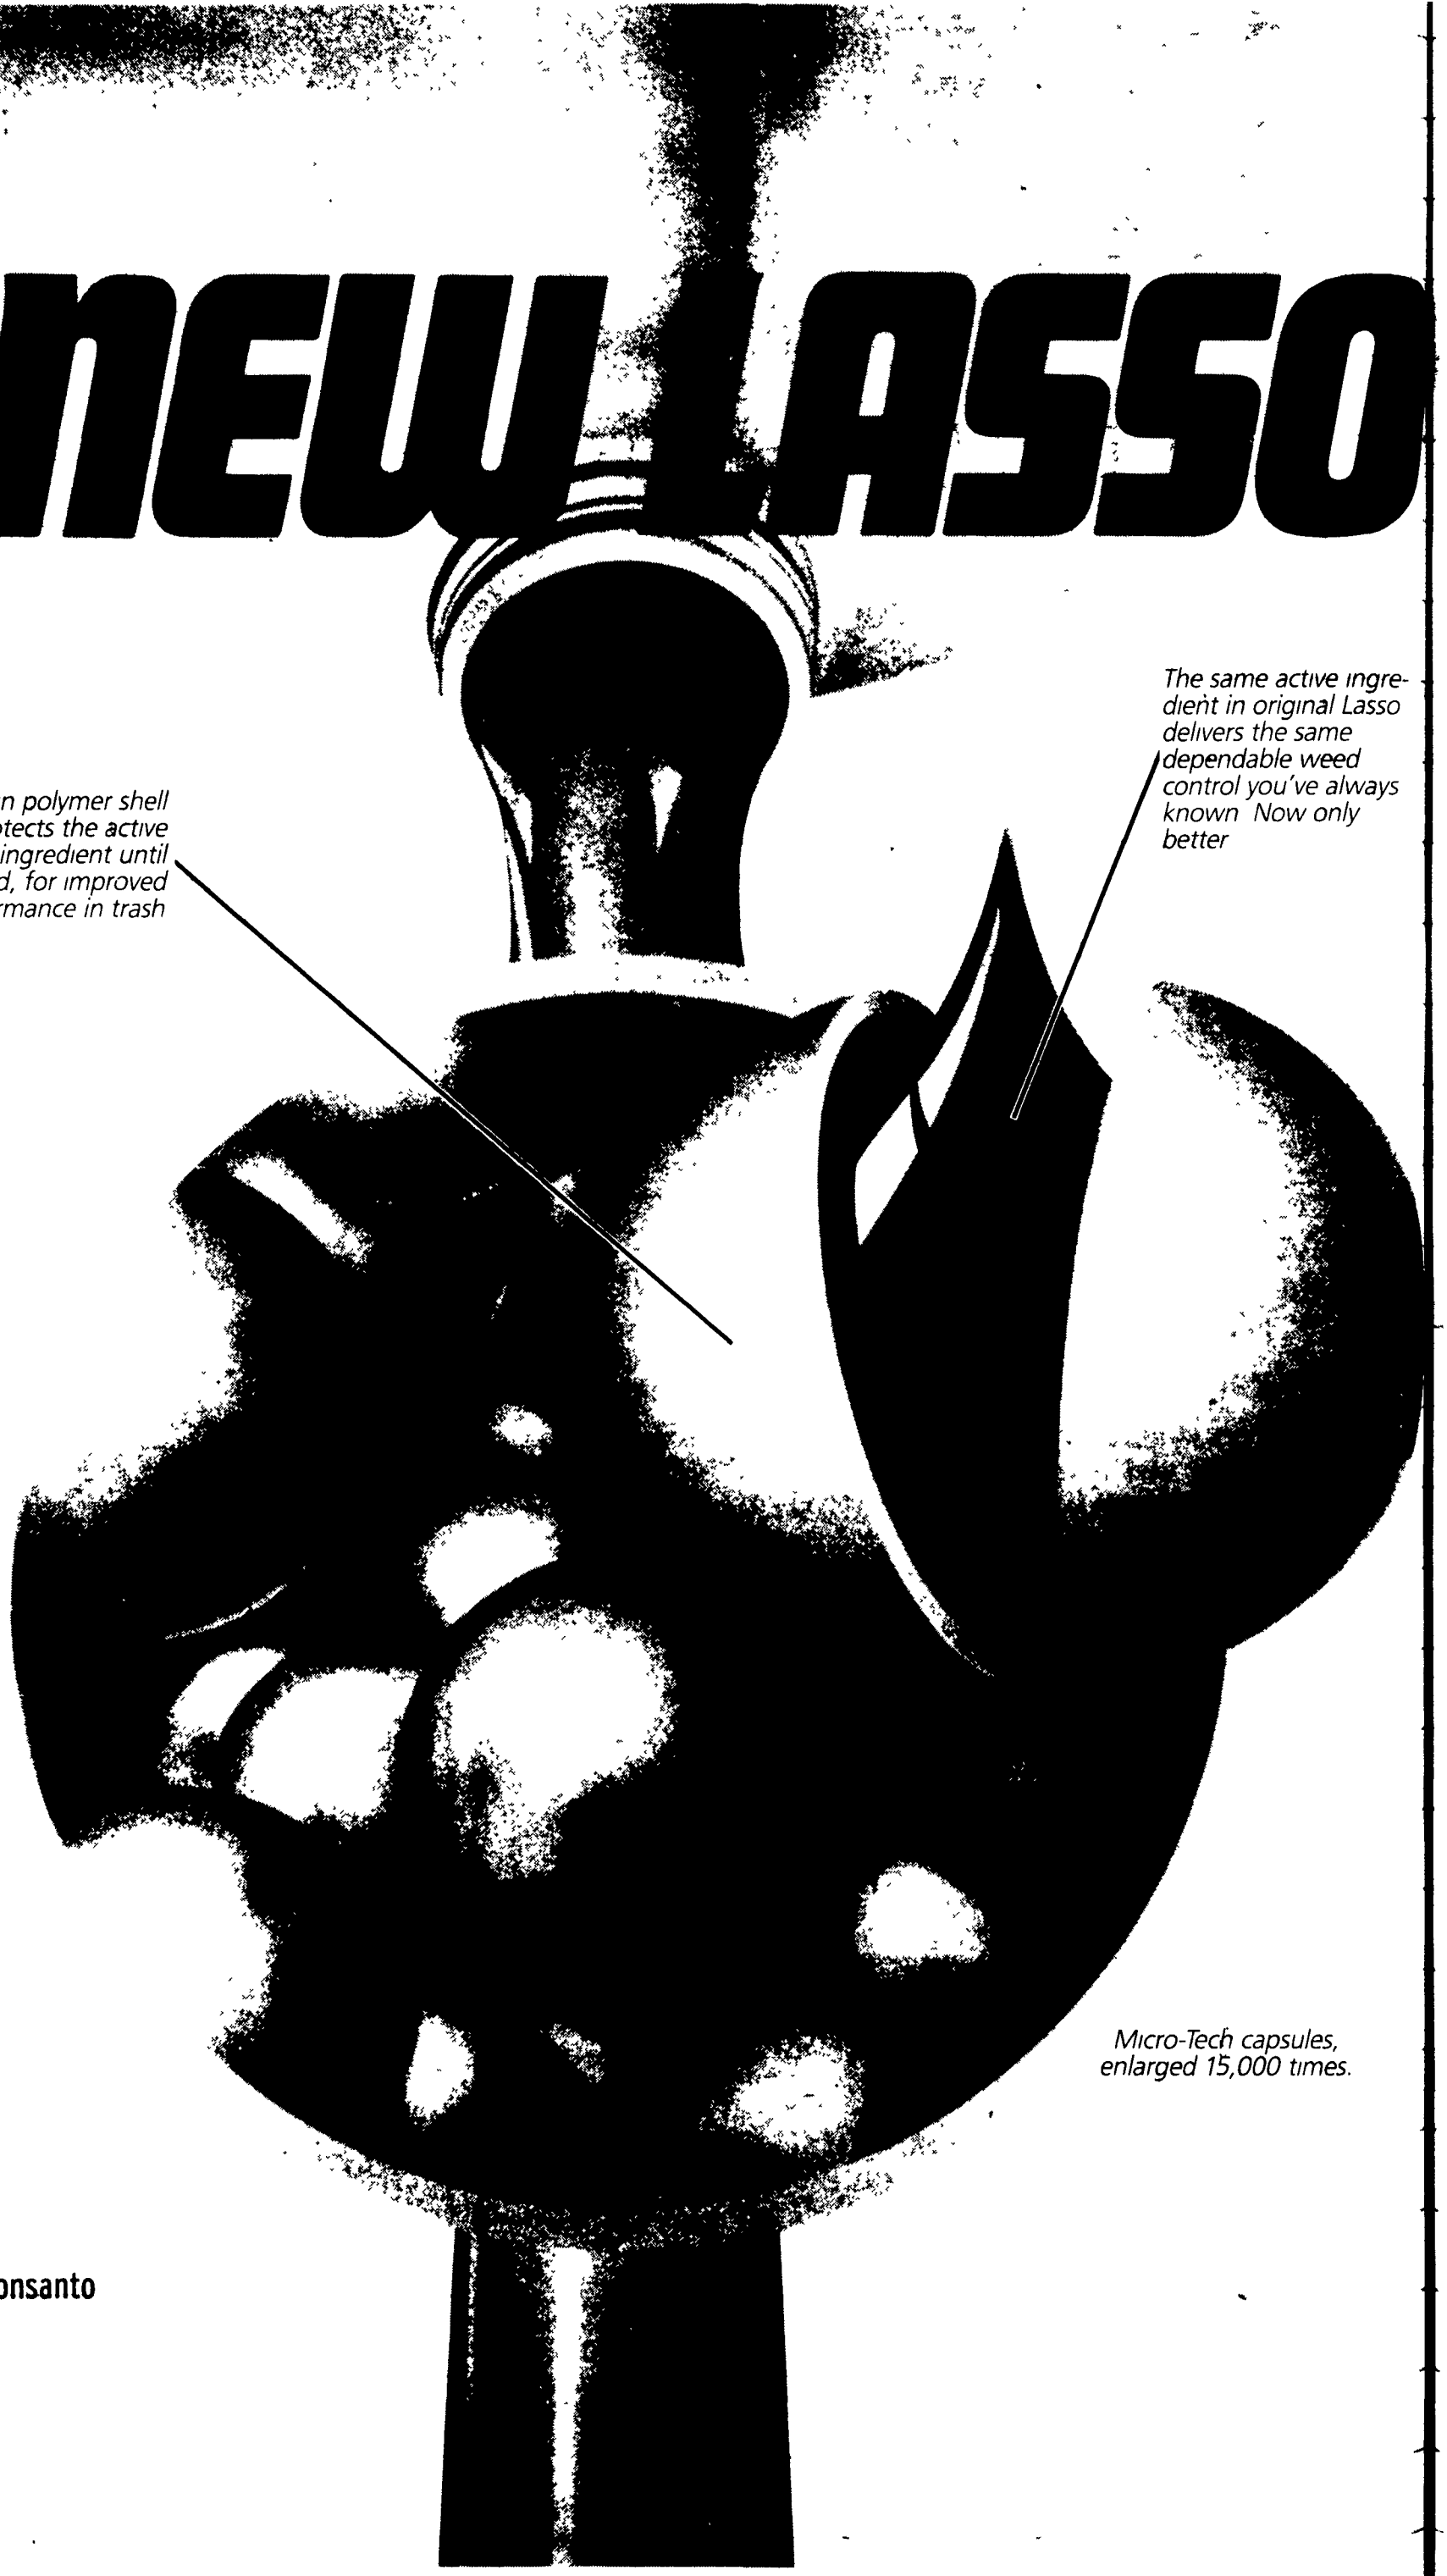
NEW LASSO

A thin polymer shell protects the active ingredient until released, for improved performance in trash

The same active ingredient in original Lasso delivers the same dependable weed control you've always known. Now only better



Micro-Tech capsules, enlarged 15,000 times.

Monsanto

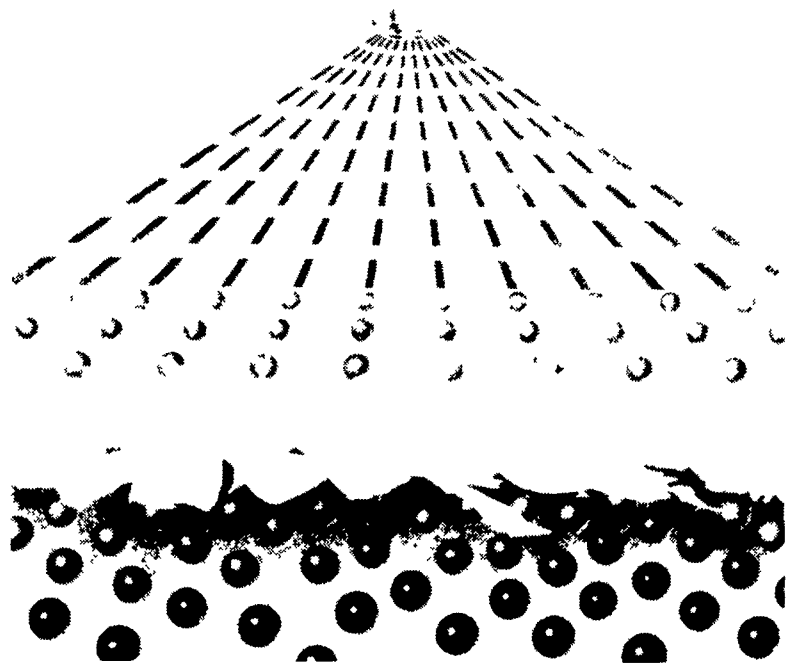
MICRO-TECH™

LESS GOES TO WASTE IN TRASH MORE GOES TO WORK ON WEEDS

For farmers with conservation tillage on their mind, new Lasso® Micro-Tech™ represents a major breakthrough in herbicide technology that improves weed control in crop residue.

The patented Micro-Tech formula encases the active ingredient of Lasso in microscopic polymer shells so small you can fit millions in a single teaspoon. These tiny Micro-Tech capsules penetrate trash more easily, without being tied up or lost through volatilization. Micro-Tech also resists microbial breakdown. Which means Lasso herbicide goes to work where it's needed, when it's needed. For better performance in crop residue.

With new Lasso Micro-Tech you'll still get the advantages of regular Lasso: dependable full-season control, less herbicide stress and maximum yield potential.



Tiny Micro-Tech capsules move through the trash barrier more easily to where weeds germinate

So this season, take advantage of the new herbicide that helps you reap the benefits of reduced tillage—without the drawback of reduced weed control.

Break through with new Lasso Micro-Tech.

Lasso MICRO-TECH™

The Dairy Business

Low Base For 1985?

Order 4 producers who are successfully nearing the end of the Dairy Opportunity (DO) program are facing a perplexing problem. Their reduced production through last fall has substantially lowered the base for class I price in the coming year. A lower base means that more of the milk they produce will be paid for at the excess price. How will it effect their blend price for milk produced through 1985? A low base and high excess will undoubtedly result in a lower blend price, for at least the rest of the year.

If you are shipping milk to a Federal Order 4 market, there may be a temptation to change to another market that doesn't have a fall base-excess plan. It seems at first glance that a market with no base requirement would give a producer a higher return for the year. But would it really? The only way to find out is to make a careful comparison between the actual farm prices paid by the two Federal Orders. And it must be done on a month-to-month basis. Be sure you take a careful look at all of the variables before you take a chance on changing markets. The fire might be hotter than the frying pan!

Let The Apple Juggle The Data

I have tried to analyze the situation with the use of the computer, and the results are at least revealing, if not altogether conclusive. A computer spreadsheet program, which uses known variables on a monthly basis for a specific farm situation, can determine the advantage or disadvantage of one order over another, if any. Month by month data on cow numbers, average production per cow, and the on-farm price for each order is analyzed using several years data. The bottom line quickly reveals any edge that one order might have.

Now, the beauty of the problem is that it can calculate the effect of a reduced base price, if it has been established. But one of the compensations that you can quickly spot is that the non-base market usually pays a lower price in those months that normally are surplus months! The result can be a stalemate at the end of the year. Very little difference can be seen in total income between Federal Orders that are available here in Pennsylvania.

There can be a big spread between two different Federal Order price structures in certain months. And if your production is high for those months, the income difference will be more noticeable. However, the differences tend to level out at the end of the year, when all the months are tallied.

Don't Be Too Hasty Too Change

By far the most important consideration for those producers who were forced into a low base situation last fall is to hold on to a sound market for their milk. If you are planning to expand the herd this year, do it next fall during the period for setting next year's base. Sell some of those spring fresheners and bank the cash, or buy heifers bred for fall freshening. It isn't easy to adjust the herd, but a little planning now will set the stage for next year.

That extra $1.50 a hundred for full base production will pay a lot of bills. But no one should panic into changing markets, just because there might be a slight edge in price for one year. Next year might be just the opposite. Stick with a good market, and plant to establish a favorable base next year.

Peace Corps needs agricultural volunteers in Africa

WASHINGTON — In response to the staggering, long term needs created by food shortages in Africa, Peace Corps Director Loret Miller Ruppe has launched a nationwide appeal to graduates, retirees and others with work experience or degrees in agriculture, forestry, biology, health/nutrition, mechanics and water systems.

Appearing on the CBS Morning News, Ruppe said, "We need at least 10,000 Americans with agricultural skills to contact the Peace Corps. We must begin the application process immediately, so Peace Corps can fill its requests for agricultural Volunteers in Africa."

Peace Corps received in excess of 160,000 inquiries last year. But, for Peace Corps to meet its Africa agriculture and nutrition trainee requests for spring and summer 1985, at least 10,000 Americans with agriculture-related skills must contact the agency now. "Peace Corps is competitive," she stressed. "Only the most qualified applicants will be accepted.

"Peace Corps is tapping every known source," Ruppe said, adding that the appeal for skilled Volunteers is already underway. Telegrams to major agricultural colleges and universities and chief executive officers of agribusiness corporations have been sent. Additionally, Ruppe has sent letters to members of Congress to encourage them to appeal to their constituencies.

"Feeding people is more than just growing food," Ruppe continued. "To alleviate the African food shortage, long term solutions to all aspects of food production must be solved, and Peace Corps is — always has been — working in the total agricultural arena."

Ruppe also announced the launching of a major programmatic change within the agency in response to the continuing African famine: the Peace Corps Africa Food Systems Initiative. According to Ruppe, "This initiative will be implemented by making use of a multi-faceted, multi-phased, and multi-year team approach.

"The current crisis in African presents an unparalleled challenge to the world. Through its existing projects and additional food system programs now being implemented, Peace Corps is mobilizing and applying skills learned in 24 years of community-level development," Ruppe said.

This initiative is being undertaken in response to the Administration's commitment to making long-term improvements in the African food situation and represents a redirection of Peace Corps resources to meet this pressing need. Over 1,200 agricultural skilled Volunteers are currently working in Africa.

Interested Americans with agricultural related skills or education should call (800) 424-8580 during working hours, Monday throuh Friday.

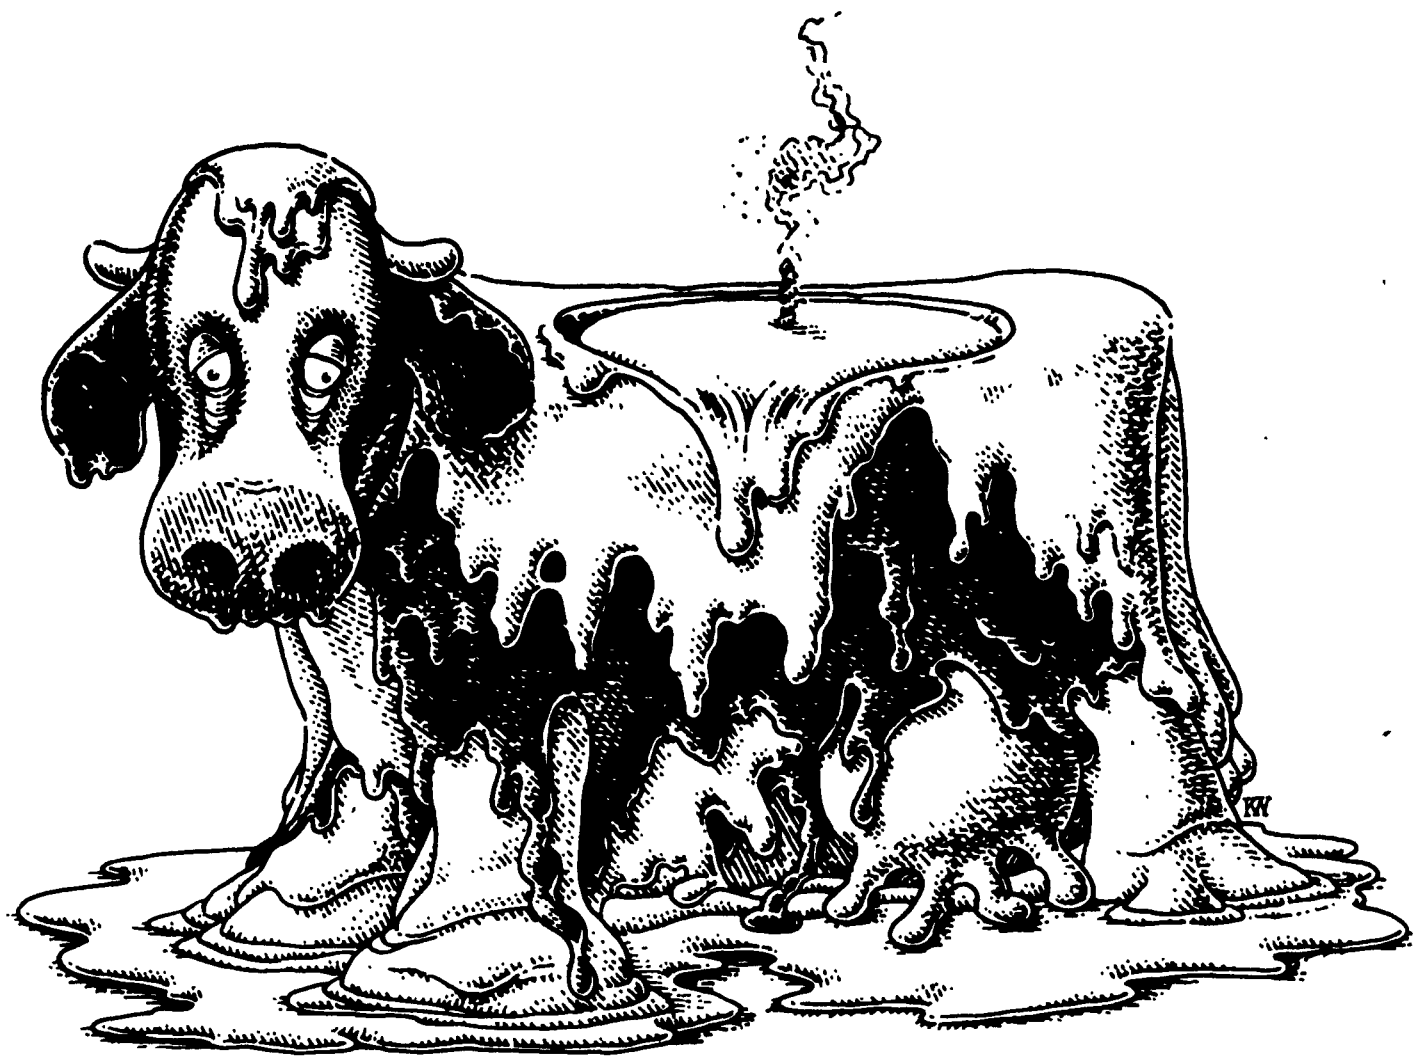
Introducing the end of burned-out cows.



With new Purina® Maxi-Tech™ 40 Milking Concentrate.
brand

High-energy feeding can increase your milk production. That's the good news. The bad news is with this increase often comes a decrease in your cow's body condition and butterfat levels.

But now, the great news. Maxi-Tech™ brand 40 milking concentrates will increase your production with minimal body weight loss in early lactation and will help maintain butterfat test levels.

Only new Maxi-Tech 40 has the optimal combination of high energy and palatability. In fact, new Maxi-Tech 40 is the highest energy product on the market today. It will increase production both at peak and throughout the lactation period.

Stop by soon, and see how Maxi-Tech 40 can keep both your cows and production in tip-top shape.
